THE CRIMSON BLIND

BY FRED M. WHITE

"I don't want to be a premator," he said. "Yes, you'd make a lovely chaplain's pet, but I can't spare you. I'm going to smash that 'ere wily brain of yours, so as it won't be useful any more. I'll teach you to put the marks on a poor chap like myself."

"Merritt, I swear to you that I never—"

"You can swear till you're black in the face, and you can keep on swearing till you're white again, and then it won't be any good. You gave me away to Taylor because you were afraid I should do you harm at Littlemer Castle. That Daisy Bell of a girl there told me so."

Henson groaned. It was not the least part of his humiliation that a mere girl got the better of him in this way. And what on earth had she known of Reuben Taylor? But the fact remained that she had known, and that she had warned Merritt of his danger. It was the one unpardonable crime in Henson's reckoning, the one thing Merritt could not forgive.

Henson's time was come. He did not need anyone to tell him that. Unless something in the nature of a miracle happened, he was a dead man in a few moments. He had never seemed quite so sweet as it tasted at the present time.

breath on his neck. And he was breathing heavily and distressfully himself, while he could hear how steadily Merritt's lungs were working. He could see the lights of Longdon Grange below him; but they seemed a long way off, whilst that steady pursuit behind had something relentless and nerve-destroying about it.

They were pounding through the village now. Henson gave vent to one cry of distress, but nothing came of it but the mocking echo of his own voice from a distant belt of trees. Merritt shot out a short, sneering laugh. He had not expected flagrant cowardice like this. He made a sudden spurt forward and caught Henson by the tail of his coat.

With a howl of fear the latter tore himself away, and Merritt reeled backwards. He came down heavily over a big stone, and at the same moment Henson trod on a hedge-stake. He grabbed it up and half-turned upon his foe. But the sight of Merritt's grin was too much for him, and he turned and resumed his flight once more.

He yelled again as he reached the lodge-gates, but the only response was the barking and howling of the dogs in the thick underwood beyond. There was no help for it. Doubtless the dead old lodge-keeper had been in bed hours ago. Even the dogs were preferable to Merritt. Henson scrambled headlong over the wall and crashed through the thickets beyond.

Merritt pulled up, panting with his exertion.

"Gone to cover," he muttered. "I don't fancy I'll follow. The dogs there might have a weakness for tearing my throat out, and Henson will keep. I'll just hang about here till daylight and wait for my gentleman. And I'll follow him to the end of the earth."

Meanwhile Henson blundered on blindly, fully under the impression that Merritt was still upon his trail. One of the hounds, a puppy three parts grown, rose and playfully pulled at his coat. It was a sheer play, but at the same time it was a terrible handicap, and in his fear, Henson lost all his horror of the dogs.

"Loose, you brute," he panted. "Let go, I say. Very well, take that!"

He paused and brought the heavy stake down full on the dog's muzzle. There was a snarling scream of pain, and the big pup sprang for his assailant. An old, gray hound came and seemed to take in the situation at a glance. He gave a deep growl, he bounded at Henson and caught him by the throat. Before the ponderous impact of that fine free spring Henson went down heavily to the ground.

"Help!" he gurgled. "Help! help!"

The worrying teeth had been firmly fixed, the ponderous weight pressed all the breath from Henson's distressed lungs. He gurgled once again, gave a little shuddering sigh, and the world dwindled to a thick sheet of blinding darkness.

CHAPTER LVII.

Hide-and-Seek.

Bell's professional enthusiasm got the better of his curiosity for the moment. It was a nice physiological problem. Already Steve was impulsively busy in the conservatory pulling the pots down. It was a regretful thing to be sacrificed, David shut his teeth grimly and proceeded with his task.

"What on earth are you doing?" Bell asked, with a smile.

"Pulling the place to pieces," David responded. "I daresay I shall feel pretty sick about it later on, but that thing has to be done. Cut those wires for me, and let those creepers down as tenderly as possible. We can't get the little pots until we have moved the big ones."

Bell coolly declined to do anything of the kind. He surveyed the two graceful banks of flowers there, the carefully trained creepers trailing so naturally and yet so artistically from the roof to the ground, and the sight pleased him.

"My dear chap," he said, "I am not going to sit here and allow you to destroy the work of so many hours. There is not the slightest reason to disturb anything. Unless I am greatly mistaken, Van Sneek will lay his hand upon the ring for us without so much as the sacrifice of a blossom."

"I don't fancy so," Van Sneek replied. "I can't remember."

"Well, you are going to," Bell said, cheerfully. "Did you ever hear of artificial memory?"

"The sort of thing you get in law courts and political speeches?" David suggested. "All the same, if you have some patent way of getting at the facts I shall be only too glad to spare my poor flowers of this garden."

Van Sneek obeyed quietly, remarking that the scent was very pungent. The Dutchman was restless and ill at ease. He seemed to be dissatisfied with himself—he had the air of a man who has set out with two extremely important matters of business, and who has completely forgotten what one of them is.

"You needn't distress yourself," David said, kindly.

"I beg your pardon," Bell said, tartly. "He is to do that very same thing. Mental exercise hurts nobody. Van Sneek is going to worry till he puzzles it out. Will you describe the ring to us?"

UPRISING IN SUMATRA

The Rebellion Alarming in Its Proportions—Three Battles Fought.

The Hague, June 24.—A rebellion has broken out at Padang, on the west coast of Sumatra, which has reached alarming proportions.

According to telegrams from Batavia, Java, almost the whole native population is reported to have risen under the leadership of fanatical priests.

Thirty European settlements are spread over a wide area and there are only 2,400 Dutch soldiers available to defend them.

Three battles have been fought, resulting in considerable loss on both sides.

Preparations are being made to embark all the Dutch women and children from the west coast of Sumatra to places of safety. The dissatisfaction arose over the tax regulations.

FLOWER SHOW IS VERY ATTRACTIVE

Exhibits Are More Beautiful and Numerous Than in the Past.

The flower show held by the Horticultural Society in the city hall was opened last evening with as fine a collection of flowers as has graced any exhibition held by the society.

The hall is well filled, there being but very few empty spaces on the tables.

Last night there was a steady stream of visitors, and all expressed great satisfaction at the display of flowers.

The number of exhibitors is larger than formerly, especially among the amateurs. As the show is particularly to encourage the latter, this fact is the source of much satisfaction to the officers of the society.

The Roses.

Roses make the best showing of any variety. This spring has been particularly good for this beautiful flower, and the result is shown in the exquisite collection at the show.

"It is as fine a showing of roses as I have seen in a long time," said Parks Superintendent Pearce.

Mr. R. Puddicombe has an excellent collection, especially in the reds. Mr. John Stevenson and Mr. C. J. Gamme have splendid lots. Mr. W. W. Gamme shows some really beautiful buds.

An exhibit that attracted a great deal of attention last night was the collection of wild flowers of Professor Bowman. Among the number were some fine specimens of wild orchid, "ladies' slippers," as they are known. They were very pretty. Professor

THE REASON

Why Anderson & Nelles, Our Local Druggists, Continue to Recommend Vinol.

First: Because it is not a patent medicine and it contains besides tonic iron all of the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cod's livers, but without a drop of oil to nauseate and upset the stomach, and retard its work; therefore, wherever old-fashioned cod liver oil or emulsions will do good, Vinol will do far more good.

Second: Because Vinol acts first upon the stomach, creates a healthy appetite, strengthens and tones up the digestive organs, purifies and enriches the blood, and in a natural manner, restores health and strength.

Third: Because Vinol contains no injurious drugs to rely upon the system; every ingredient being named on the label, a patient knows exactly what he is taking.

Fourth: Because we never sold anything in our store that gave such universal satisfaction for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers, and to build up the system after a severe sickness, and for relieving hacking coughs, chronic colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

Try Vinol on our guarantee. Anderson & Nelles, druggists, 268 Dundas street, first store west of Wellington street. Sign, Big Red Cross. Phone No. 20.

Bowman also had some lilies and other varieties of wild plants.

The Asylum exhibit is a credit to that institution. It is particularly strong in Canterbury bells. "The Asylum is showing the finest collection of Canterbury bells I ever saw," said Mr. Pearce.

There is a strong class of delphiniums on exhibition. The Asylum, Springbank Park, Mr. C. J. Fox and others have some good ones.

Mr. C. J. Fox and Mr. P. H. Good show many foxgloves of much beauty.

Other Exhibits.

Mr. George W. Winterbottom has a grand collection of sweet peas. He has them all properly named, which assists the visitor a great deal in appreciating the exhibit.

Mr. Edgar Jeffrey shows some beautiful English iris, and Dr. A. O. Jeffrey has a fine collection of columbines, a very rare pink flower being one of the best.

The showing of pansies is rather disappointing, very few of this popular little flower being on exhibition.

Among the exhibitors are Messrs. R. W. Puddicombe, C. F. Compin, T. J. Leitch, David Sare, P. H. Good, W. H. F. Bartlett, H. W. Givens, W. W. Gamme, J. Stevenson, W. Moore, James Luttman, Edgar Jeffrey, C. J. Fox, Dr. A. O. Jeffrey, Professor Bowman, J. H. Gramlich, R. A. Jones, W. E. Sanders, George W. Winterbottom, Mrs. A. J. Morgan, Miss E. McMechan, H. V. Smith, London Asylum, water commission, O. Ellwood, R. A. Ross, H. Barty, A. E. Roberts, R. Southam, F. J. Reed, Miss Fleming, Miss Irene Russell and others.

The show is free to all, and is being well patronized.

Such efforts on the part of the Horticultural Society should be well patronized.

The hall is open today from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

A WARNING TO THE PUBLIC RE PRINCE RUPERT.

A notice with the above heading has appeared in the Vancouver World, signed by the Prince Rupert Townsite Company, 43 Fairfield Building, Vancouver. A statement is therein made that their property is the original and only legal Prince Rupert, and the railway company own 4,000 to 5,000 acres of arable land immediately surrounding the same.

The above statement is misleading and incorrect as the only townsites registered are: South Prince Rupert, owned, it is understood, by the company who signed the above warning, and the townsite of Prince Rupert at the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, situated at the north-west portion of Kaien Island. The distance between these two townsites is over eleven miles, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company is not in any way interested in South Prince Rupert, nor is it the intention to have a station at that place.

East Prince Rupert, so-called in various reports which have appeared in the press, is not registered; the sub-division referred to is situated over 16 miles from the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and is not on the line of that railway.

The Prince Rupert at the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is now being surveyed, and it is expected the lots will be placed in the market in September or October next, due notice of which will appear in the public press.

Any further information the public may require can be obtained by addressing the Land Commissioner of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Winnipeg.
