The Crimson Slipper.

BY DORA LANGLOIS.

(Continued.) "I shall do myself the pleasure of seeing you off," he replied. "That's sufficient for the present. Candidly, I am under the impression that you are not so much as you seem. Keep your eyes open, and where you go, you have business to transact. If you think of returning to town, we may possibly meet again."

lock it when a voice made me turn. "Good-morning, Duncan. I'm glad to see you back." It was my friend Herman in his dressing-gown who greeted me thus cordially. He had returned during my absence, it seemed, and had doubtless rushed up to wake him with the information that I had turned up as unexpectedly as I had departed.

TRIENNIAL CONVENTION. Mrs. Robert Thomson Among Speakers at Women's Council in Washington.

Washington, April 12.—Mrs. Mary Wood Swift, the president, called the National Council of Women together yesterday to begin the real work of its fifth triennial meeting. Sessions were opened at 10 o'clock Friday. There were three sessions of the council. In the morning there were various incidental matters attended to; in the afternoon the annual address of Mrs. Swift was followed by reports from various affiliated organizations; and in the evening greetings were heard from a number of prominent women interested in the betterment of childhood and womanhood, including Mrs. Walter Barrett, Mrs. Flo Jamison Miller, Mrs. Frances E. Burns, Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. May Wright Sewall and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Granda.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP The first dose will convince you that it will cure you. Miss Hannah Fleming, New Germany, N. S., writes: "I contracted a cold that took such a hold on me that my people thought I was going to die. Hearing how good Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was, I procured two bottles and they effected a complete cure."

er people were crowded out. They not only came in crowds, but many of them being foreigners and unable to speak English they were difficult to handle. They have been excluded, therefore, but with regret. One young Frenchman at one exhibition told many interesting things concerning best raising in his own country; a young coachman, whose children attended the school objected to the fact that there were flowers and no berries on a certain plant that was shown. It was explained that the flowers appeared in the Spring and the berries only in the Fall, and he acknowledged that it was only in driving through the country in the Fall that he had seen the plant.

There are nearly 1,700 children in the school alone, and the time has been divided so far as to enable the children of all the nearby schools, including those of two districts, to visit the school. It is a very large building, and the children are very happy. The children of the nearby schools, including those of two districts, to visit the school. It was early, of course, but I was right in thinking that she would not refuse to see me, or keep me waiting long for an audience. "Ah, Mr. Duncan," she cried, holding out her pretty hand to me with an engaging smile, "what brings you here so early? Upon my word, you look as solemn and important as if you had been summoned to Windsor on affairs of State."

"What do you mean?" she stammered. "I mean," I replied, "that I was taken forcibly to London to have an interview with the person whose name you bid against us unsuccessfully for Mr. Danvers' desk." "What became of the desk?" she asked in a low voice. "It was broken into that very night," I replied, "and the copy of certain papers were urgently required. Mrs. Montgomery, and, believe me, you will consult your own best interests in surrendering them if you have them."
