GREEK ROYALTIES ARE UNCONCERNED

Constantine's Relatives Apparently Have Confidence in Him

PRINCE'S ENGLISH WIFE

Alice of Battenburg Embarrassed at inability to Extend Hospitality to British Officers—The Royal Family and the War

Athens, Nov. 14.—(Correspondence)—"We believe that it is better for Greece to make sure of keeping what she has got than to risk what she has won in two costly wars in the hope of getting more."

One of the princes of Greece was speaking to the Associated Press correspondent, explaining the attitude of the royal family of Greece, which has been so much criticized both here and abroad.

If the royal estate of the house of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg (to give it its full title) is at stake in Greece at this moment, as many are ready to affirm, the fact would never appear from the demeanour of those most concerned.

Constantine I. is undoubtedly well aware that the tenacity with which he has held to the determination that Greece shall not enter the European struggle has brought on one political crisis after another in the internal affairs of the country. He has followed with apparent equanimity the erosion and fall of one cabinet after another, and cannot be ignorant that he has set himself against the expressed will of his people and has driven the people's idols, Eleutherios Constantine Venizelos, into a political corner, from which there appears to be no outlet; that he is looked upon as having become in fact, if not in name, the sole dictator of the future destinies of Greece.

The chief statement which he has made of his policy or his intention since the beginning of the political crisis in Greece, following the second election of Venizelos by a majority of the Greek people.

The king's brothers and his children, if he can be said, regard the course he has followed as a matter of complete confidence. Whatever the personal influence of the queen, who is the German Emperor's sister, the responsibility is Constantine's.

On the ordering of the mobilization, King Constantine did not go at once to Saloniki to place himself at the head of his country's troops as commander-in-chief. His late illness was given as the reason, but the real reason, it is declared, lay in his unwillingness to leave the political direction of the country in the hands of M. Venizelos or his party. Not even when foreign troops were landed on Greek soil at Greece's second city did Constantine I. alter his decision. He merely sent his twenty-five-year-old son, the "Diadochos," Duke of Sparta, in his place, and detailed the boy's thirty-three-year-old uncle, Prince Andrew, to look after him.

The two camps out in a temporary sort of way. It is generally believed that because the Princess Alice of Battenberg, Prince Andrew's wife, does not come to Saloniki often or stay long. She is said to find it too embarrassing, being herself an English princess, to be in a bitter quarrel with British officers and British peers, whom she had known for years, without being able to extend them the slightest hospitality lest the courtesy be misconstrued as a sort of acquiescence in the presence of foreign troops on Greek soil.

Neither the "Diadochos" nor his uncle, Prince Andrew, apparently can quite get used to the situation in Saloniki. There they are, in their own country, at their respective posts of command in their country's army, already mobilized and prepared for any emergency. Yet it is they who sit idle. Foreign troops, guns, horses, supplies, ambulances, munitions, pass and repass on their way to active work at the front engaged in conflict with a nation that has been Greece's bitter enemy—and the Greeks merely parade.

The other day the two princes went up to a Great fortress near Dourball, at the very edge of the Serbian frontier. They could hear the cannonading plainly; they could see against the sky the red flash of the opposing guns; they knew every foot of the land where the fighting was going on. Almost it was at their threshold. Soldiers both, they listened and watched for hours, absorbed, edgy and tense. And then they put up their binoculars, mounted their horses and rode back to Saloniki.

Evening Up. He—Why do you dwell so constantly on my bad traits? She—To preserve a proper equilibrium. You yourself are likely to keep me reminded of the few good ones you possess.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How to Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in nose or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffing, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, unless relief comes instantly. It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and gnawing of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.
