Rich Collar Maker Is Guarded To Shield Him From Women. NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—As the result of what he regards as attempts by women to lure him, and other plots, Max Phillips, wealthy collar manufacturer and polo player, is being closely guarded on his 700 acre estate near Easton, N. J.

Eight armed detectives are on guard. Phillips carries a pistol. Watch dogs give warning of a stranger's approach. Meanwhile, three women, presumably detective, and a male detective, are out on bail, after being arrested on the Phillips' complaint. The purpose of the plot, he says, is to weaken his control of the Phillips-Jones company. The hounding has persisted for months at the instigation of a New York banker, he says.

The charges against the three women and the man vary from conspiracy to carrying concealed weapons. One of the women posed as a Countess and the other as her maid. A heavily veiled woman, with abnormally big feet and hands, eluded the guards sufficiently yesterday to approach Phillips.
