PREDICTION IN TIMES THAT'S PROVING TRUE

Joe Page Writes of Great Come-Back of Civilian Baseball With End of War

(By Joe Page.)
Several months ago through the columns of The Times-Star I predicted the wonderful revival the baseball game would enjoy within a very short period after the war was declared off.
At that time my calculation was based on what had occurred in a much smaller measure during the Civil War of 1861-65. Within three months after the start of the war between the North and the South there was no civilian baseball played at all. On the other hand both the soldiers of the Federal and Confederate forces were playing the game with such fervor that at times the attendance figures at these games approached the 50,000 mark. The longer the war continued the hotter and more enthusiastic became the baseball fan for the game.

Within a year after the cessation of hostilities between the Blue and the Gray, the first meeting to form an association of professional baseball clubs resulted in so many cities and towns wishing to be enrolled that the baseball game was adopted as the national game of America.
The only difference between the late conflict and that of the Civil War so far as the baseball game is concerned, is that the great war was such a bigger thing than the war of '61. The very thing which was the cause of the professional civilian game in the conflict just over, civilian baseball being for the time counted down and out.
On the other hand as during the Civil War, what did we all witness? Soldiers and sailors by the thousands, yes hundreds and hundreds of thousands playing the game over there behind the firing line with organizations such as the K. of C., Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army and last but not least the Clark Griffith bat and ball fund, working the organizations to death trying to supply material and baseball directors. The result is now that the war is practically at an end that the baseball game is talked and played as never before in foreign countries. It is not a patch on what the game will do on the western continent from now out.

True, there are not so many professional leagues as there will be in a year from now, simply because of the unsettled business conditions caused by the evidently slow consummating of the peace times (which to my mind are being handled expeditiously.) But as to the leagues that are under way from the majors down they will certainly have without question the greatest year financially and otherwise that baseball has

MONCTON ATHLETICS AGAIN DISCUSSED

Informal Meeting of the Moncton Amateur Athletic Association

(Moncton Transcript)
An informal meeting of the Moncton Amateur Athletic Association was held last night in the board room of the City Building, with the President, R. W. Simpson, in the chair. A good sized representation of members was present and the whole situation regarding the getting of the grounds in shape, building of a club-house, putting up of a fence, etc., was discussed pro and con. The officers and many of the members are strongly imbued with a desire to make the association go ahead this season. Now that the war is over and many of the young men who were leading lights in sport are either back home or on their way, it is felt by the M.A.A. that it is now or never. The association is to be revived. The question of making arrangements with the Curling Club so that the latter would erect their rink and quarters on the association property is engaging the serious attention of the committee in charge of that matter.
A start has already been made towards draining the M.A.A.A. grounds and estimates regarding the cost of fencing, erection of a club-house, etc., have been gathered.
The big question engaging the attention of the managing board at present is that of finances. In order that the grounds would be put in shape this season, money and a considerable sum of it, will have to be secured. The officers and active members feel that if the sporting blood of the city, both ladies and gentlemen, would be sufficiently aroused there would be no difficulty in making the necessary financial arrangements.
