POLICE COURT.

Sundry Offenders Brought Before His Honor Today.

He Makes Some Pertinent Remarks about Religious Prejudices—

Suggestion to the Police.

The police court continues to be an attraction. This morning another large crowd of spectators waited until the docket had been gone through. The judgments were as follows:

Fred Beatty, drunk on Sheffield street, $5—paid.

Fanny Higgins, charged with stealing knives, spoons, silk handkerchiefs, rings, etc. from the home of Dr. Mc-Intyre, Main street, where she was employed as a domestic. Remanded until Saturday.

Edward Corbett, an old man, for using abusive language to Arthur Mc-Clafferty—$5.

Frank O'Neill was told to destroy a ferocious dog, which howls, as he resided to Arthur McClafferty, on Main street. Remanded until Saturday.

Herbert Spragg, charged with hitting Lock Fowler with a stake during a sleigh drive last week—$20.

Fanny Higgins was asked if she was guilty of the charge made against her of stealing the cue and snooker, but not having taken Mr. Corbett's ring.

Mr. Corbett was the gentleman who owned the valuable gold ring, and left it in charge of Dr. McIntyre. After the plaintiffs had talked the matter over with his honor the accused young woman was told to re-consider her case and plead either guilty or not guilty, for in summing up the value of the missing articles the magistrate penitentiary for a term of years. He would allow the case to stand over until Saturday, when the prisoner could plead again. In the meantime she might tell what she has done with the valuable articles, and the case might be made all the easier for her.

Edward Corbett was then called upon to tell why he had used abusive language to Arthur McClafferty, on Main street. The old man said he had nothing against McClafferty. The magistrate said he was just like a great many men, who curse at one another and talk abusively, and when asked for it, say, "O, I have nothing against the man." Corbett was charged with calling McClafferty "an Orange" and "a similar names, using the qualifying adjective "Orange" each time. His honor said it was time this "Orange" and "Mickey" business came to an end. It should not be allowed in the community. It did no good to the people or their religion. It was a trouble to the police.

Two women and two little girls were in court to press the charges of ferocious dog ownership against Frank O'Neill. Frank said the dog belonged to his brother Joseph of Britain street.

Joseph had paid its taxes and had been its master for two years. He disclaimed the dog, and placed the burden of ownership on his brother Frank. It was said the bow-wow in question had left five tooth marks on one of the lit-

What the Horticultural Association Did Last Year

Out at the Park — Plans for This Year—Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the St. John Horticultural association is being held this afternoon in the rooms of the Relief and Aid association in the Western Union building, King street. The president, J. D. Hazen, M. P. P., is absent. The following reports will convey clearly what the association has done during the past year, and what their plans for 1901 are:

GARDENER KNOTT'S REPORT.

Work was commenced for the improvement of the garden April 1st, with one man only until May 1st, increasing to four men after that date. One man has been kept busy (weather permitting) cutting out dead wood and brush, digging drains, etc., all winter. After July 6th two men were employed. About 200 loads of bog were hauled in to the garden by park man and team, for levelling and grading purposes.

Trees were very attractive to visitors the garden, also borders of trees, shrubs and hardy perennials 14 feet wide were planted inside the fence bordering on the road from south to north side. The trees, shrubs, etc., were taken from the nursery in the garden.

Two-thirds of the garden was laid out in lawns; 110 lbs. of lawn grass seed was used for that purpose. About 75 loads of manure was plowed into the land before laying down to grass, also top dressing in the fall with manure.

A rocky was built around the fountain and filled with plants. Water lilies were also planted in the fountain, and were very attractive to visitors all summer. Some additions will be made to this feature the coming season.

A patriotic flower bed was made on the north bank, near the greenhouse, and was very attractive to visitors, although the display of flowers in the greenhouse, and throughout the garden.
