A Pansy Luncheon is a pleasant affair to think about. In early October, long, slender boughs of maple in their glory of color, and pansles of varied hues, are a most hamonious combination for both table and room decorations. An original way to ornament the centre of a table is to use two big shallow pans, lengthwise. Fill them with sand and make them a perfect bed of pansles. The the pins ground the outside with slivery green ribbon and maidenhair ferns.

A pansy face (without the stem) on a triangle of fern may be placed at each cover.

Dinner cards made of maple leaves are very pretty at this season, and if the leaves are soaked in water for a while, and the surface dried for the writing of the guests' names, they will not ourl up for several hours. The each leaf to a twig with baby ribbon.

A Ribbon Luncheon suggests pretty and graceful decorations. Use as many colored ribbons three inches wide as there will be guests. Attach the ribbons to the chandeller and then bring the other ends to the various places, fastening each one with a pretty bow. Provided the guests with little bows of baby ribbon, in lieu of place cards, corresponding in color to the other ribbons on the table.

Another pretty ribbon effect at a luncheon may be obtained in the following manner: The flowers should be red. At the base of the centrepiece flave asparagus fern and over the entire table strev a number of yards of table decoration for winter.

A Ping-Pong Luncheon deserves mention for the novelty of the idea as well as for the eleverness of the hostess in planning her menu. The table decorations consisted of two ping-pong nets stretched diagonally cross four racquets of white parchment with scarlet edges were placed. From these rose a bunch of asparagus ferns, and stuck amid the ferns, like big roses, were a dozen rosettes of taffeta ribbon of six different shades of red and pink. The name cards were of white cardboard cut in the shape of racquets with red edges.

menu cards are distributed as the guests arrive, the courses being written on the left-hand side of a double card, and the right side left biank. Have as many courses as the number of gentlemen invited. Each man must proceed to engage a partner for the soup, fish, entree, and so on, until a different lady is engaged for each course, After the cards are filled the guests all go to the dinner-room, each one with the chosen first partner. At the end of the first course each gentleman rises, takes his napkin and seeks his partner.

Wash and mix thoroughly with the meat. Season to taste with sait, pepper and a little onion juice, and pack in a baking dish or mold. Let stand for a few minutes so it will take the shape, then turn out into a roasting pan.

In the pan put a bay leaf, an onion cut into bits, one cupful of tomatoes, a pint of water and a little sait and pepper. Place in a moderate oven and let bake for two hours, basting every fifteen minutes. If the water cooks off add more, a little at a time as needed. When cooked remove the loaf to a plat-

A "Gift" Luncheon full of surprises is an original and delightful way for a young girl to entertain her friends. At the end of each course a little parcel is brought in by the servant to the hostess, who reads from the wrapper the name of one of the guests. At the close of the luncheon each girl took one of the rosettes and found in it a tiny silver pin in the shape of a racquet to pin on her gown. The two who chose the same color had to meet each other in the tournament which occupied the rest of the afternoon.

Tournament tousts become wearlsome it is well to vary the family menus with a meat loaf now and again.
