Gold air of evening folding in the day.
Ah, when you watch aloft on eager wing
Their tiny cross-bows sharp against the blue,
Will you divine what dreams are following?
How with the birds my heart goes southward too?

Out on the fir-blue hills, my heart, in the autumn weather,
autumn weather,
Heareth the lullaby croon of the Earth-Mother rocking her children;
Seeketh, in evening shade, the fragrant breath of her bosom;
Feeleth the placid repose of her being in ripples of motion
That, urged by her voice into wayes of quiescent rejoicing.
Go pulsing the shores of the ego in rhythms of magical splender. That, draged by her votice into waves of quiescent rejoicing.

Go pulsing the shores of the ego in rhythms of magical splendor.

Out from those blue-rimmed hills my heart return not, lest knowing Once more the old discontent, thou hear not the Earth-Mother crooning.

Crooning of love ever faithful, of joy on the Hill-rim dreaming.
