

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C274563

A poets diary

2652 Prolegomena Pacis LXXXVI: Moscow and the Bomb III

3.4.46.

The Third World War is practically begun;
It is yet in words, said openly or hidden,
Both sides in search of the best way to run
Towards a final success. But a fact, sudden
For naive masses still trusting their leaders lies
Perhaps unexpected, not such for true scholars of Peace
May occur any moment, via Teheran or Triest!
And at once the confusion in O.N.U. will sound deadly!

Soviets have their plan like German over prepared For eventualities different! Everywhere allies
They possess in the heart of their foes, paid and fed
To let them know at once all what applies
To their benefit. Not so on the Christian-Liberty side!
And that is intolerably dangerous; to ride
Two horses at once is the pure way to disaster!
The first thing to do is to open rudely the eyes of the masses.

One of the most popular cries during the First War
Down with secret Diplomacy! must now be the slogan
Of the Democratic side: one sided secrets profit to the State,
The Red one! masses deceiving! At once a ban
Ought to be published, hardly punishing each press-lie
And foreign agents action. O.N.U. has at once to clean the sky
All falsity outthrowing and thus Soviets in the - pushing
That's the only chance to get Peace, the Bomb well in hand keeping!

B. de S.L.