

CLASS REPORTS

We regret to report the old ARTS '11 complaint, lack of interesting news. Occasionally, of course, our professors make jokes — and these, breaking the monotony of jussive subjunctions, predicative datives, or problems on capital, seem at the time very funny indeed. At least we all take advantage of them to raise the dust; but, after studying them over, we feel we do not dare to print them in a class report.

The tide of our lives is flowing far too smoothly in Arts '11; it is to be hoped that some genius will do something original and startling, worthy to be written up by our pencil, which we now lay down in disgust.

The Freshman class in MEDICAL medicine this year is a SCHOOL '13 large one, numbering about 78 men. Soon after the opening of the session an election of class officers was called for by Mr. —, the
