How He Made the Boy "Set." From the Detroit Free Press. By the Paulist Fathers.

From the Detroit Free Press. All the adult passengers in the waiting room had their attention attracted by his antics. He wanted candy, and he wanted to see the river, and he wanted to go aboard the train, and he wanted more than any city the size of Detroit could possibly furnish free grafis. His mother hushed him up the best she could, and several times he slapped her face and kicked her shins, and got off without even a pinch. By and by an old man who sat near her, and whose feet the boy had walked on several times, began to get nervous, and turning to his right-hand neighbor, said: "Iand o'masy! but I've got to git outer hare or spank that boy!" "He just aches for it !" growled the other.

And how did this unjust steward, and, strange to say, actually praises it. And how did this unjust steward, and, strange to say, actually praises it. And how did this unjust steward act 7 The unjust steward was a distonest man. He had been placed in a position of trush terms and things entries into his books, or something else the addition of the salvation of that kind. Well, the truth came out at last, as it generally does somer or later, and he was at his wit's end what to do. No thought of repentent enters into his head; he has got on a tool cal, he sends for some of his master' debtors, and in order to make them his to deal, he sends for some of his master' debtors, and in order to make them his to cal, of our could, he as we have as the addit, very hard to get out of it. Germans Should not Drink Whisky. "I have sold hundředs, I might almost say thousands of lots to Germans," said a real-estate man, "and have noted one significant fact. The moment a German takes to whisky he's gone. He may swallow beer, ale, wine, and cider enough to float a ship, and yet pull through and pay for his lot, but old rye will lay him out. When a whisky-drinking German wants to deal with me I say 'no' with an emphasis that makes his teeth rattle." —Buffalo Courier.
