

HOW EVELYN THAW DANCES,

AS SEEN BY A TORONTO CRITIC

A dramatic writer in this week's Saturday Night, expresses the following on Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw:

"Naughty people who out of unholy curiosity went to see Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw this week to see Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw have been thoroughly punished. They have been punished two dollars a seat—or whatever it was they paid for them. They have also been mugged the time they wasted and the mental agony they endured seeing a number of vaudeville performers who are not good enough to get on the regular vaudeville circuit. As for Evelyn herself—the most talked of woman in the world," according to the posters—"we have no desire to be unkind. And heaven knows we are not censorious! But no amount of notoriety, however unsavory, could disguise her homeliness or her utter lack of intelligence and skill—on the stage at least. In the witness box, I am prepared to admit she may—but on the stage, no!"

Of course we did not go to see her of our own accord. Nothing but the oath of obedience we took when we became a newspaperman—durs not to reason why, ours but to go and lie—forced us to be present. We begged the managing-editor to remember our tender youth and our spiritual leanings. But he merely made a coarse and unfeeling remark to the effect that we probably meant spiritual and that the leanings had reference to a brass rail. So, disguising himself as a member of the Vice Committee by assuming a keen and agonized expression, we hurried in, hoping no one would recognize us. But it was all right. All our friends were there, and no one can point the finger of scorn. We were all investigating together.

The first part of the programme was vaudeville. We say this without prejudice to vaudeville, which is really quite a worthy form of entertainment—at times. First a gentleman of the name of Fancher, did a number of things on bicycles, which are possibly quite hard to do. But we have seen lots of acrobats do described as "modern ballroom dancing"—meaning, whenever they were in dress. It would perhaps be more correct to say that Mr. Clifford danced, unmaking use of Mrs. Thaw in the various figures. For Evelyn cannot dance in any sense beyond that of the mechanical performance of a few simple steps. Jack Clifford does all the rest, and he could really give an excellent exhibition if he had a partner and an opportunity.

But after all people didn't go to see Evelyn dance or act—her acting is even poorer than her dancing. They merely went to see her, and they were given every opportunity. Frankness seems to be the keynote of Evelyn's character. She whirled and kicked with all the energy of which she is capable, but frankly it was a very pathetic exhibition. For Evelyn's figure is really a very, very ordinary "figger"—indeed—the kind they put on the back rows of large choruses. She hasn't even a pretty face, though her smile is ingenious and at times attractive.

THREE CENT THEATRES

Cleveland Exhibitors Who Charge That Price Will Be Barred from the League

An attempt on the part of a few exhibitors in Cleveland to inaugurate a three-cent admission price has been taken in hand by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and the latter body has determined to bar such exhibitors from membership in the league. This class of theatres is giving three reels for the three-cent admission, and so far as is known, Cleveland is the only city in the country attempting to show pictures at such a low price.

President Neff of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, recently paid a brief visit to Boston, and declared that he found conditions very discouraging from the exhibitor's point of view. "The Boston exhibitors are struggling," he said, "against the adverse condition of running eight to ten pictures, and in a few houses six acts of vaudeville and eight pictures are run for the same price."

In an effort to improve conditions in Massachusetts, George F. Washburn of the Unique Theatre, Boston, has taken charge of an active campaign for new members for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

KITTY GORDON COLAPSES

And Therefore Her Engagement at Los Angeles Is Cancelled

Kitty Gordon collapsed on the stage of the Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, night of Oct. 30, while playing her role in The Enchantress. The audience was dismissed and the engagement for the week cancelled. Miss Gordon remained in a state of unconsciousness for several hours. Nor could the attendant physicians diagnose her case. They said it would be a month or two before Miss Gordon could resume her work.

It appears that worries caused by financial difficulties were at the bottom of Miss Gordon's collapse. The company has been confronting disruption because of business reverses. Miss Gordon is arranging for one more performance in Los Angeles to obtain funds to return her stranded company back to New York.

Tom Wise as P. T. Barnum. Acting on the announced policy of the late P. T. Barnum that the public likes to be fooled, Thomas Wise is shortly to make the people believe that he is the famous showman, Harrison Rhodes, who wrote "A Gentleman from Mississippi," for Mr. Wise, has completed arrangements with Charles Frohman to collaborate with Mr. Wise on a comedy called "The Prince of Showmen." It is said that the inspiration for the piece came through a resemblance between the great circus king and the genial comedian. The piece is already under way and is scheduled for production in March. Mr. Wise was last under Frohman management in "Hook of Holland."

Maxims of the Stage

We must accept the premises of the dramatist or else avoid challenging his conclusions—James Hunkeler.

The playwright who has the genius of the first act, seldom has the genius of the fifth—James Hunkeler.

A comedy is like a cigar. If good, everyone wants a box; if bad, no amount of puffing will make it draw.—Henry James Byron.

Plucky Faversham

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: William Faversham, according to The Dramatic Mirror, has declared his allegiance to the British crown, and in Canada made some speeches which depicted Canada's dependence upon the United States for its dramatic entertainment. Quite a lucky thing for an American actor to do.

Universality of character comprehends some slight touch at least of vulgarity.—George Bernard Shaw.

When a comedy of mine is performed, it is nothing to me that the spectators laugh—any fool can make an audience laugh. I want to see how many of them, laughing or grave, have tears in their eyes.—George Bernard Shaw.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

By A Passerby

Comment on Current Events of the Past Week As Seen By a Courier Representative.

The Queen of Suffragettes, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst is at present on a visit to this side of the Atlantic. She is said to have come to form an opinion of the great question of Women's Suffrage as it is here. Others say, her visit is a practical effort to augment the funds of the society. If we combine the two and opinions differ on the question, we will not be far wrong. Here she is looked upon in many lights. Some regard her as a brave woman and others denounce her as a lawbreaker. Across in England, however, outside of her circle, she is looked upon as a woman not fit to be large. A storm of indignation was aroused against Mr. McKenna, the Home Secretary for his lenient treatment of the set, if any of Mrs. Pankhurst followers had died in prison, as the result of the starvation crusade, the British people would have regarded it as suicide. The State were afraid of it being murder.

The English employer, his manager and his workmen, alike condemn the methods of the militants. The Englishman is a fair minded man and opinion differs on the question of Women's Suffrage, but all are unanimous with regard to Mrs. Pankhurst, her methods and her followers. There are not many towns in the British Isles where the militants have established headquarters, but the anti-militants have a far larger number and are established in almost every town of any importance. The anti-militants are just as eager for women's suffrage as are the militants and they use sane methods. Mrs. Pankhurst's school are retarding the very movement which they intend to advance. Much better work for the cause is effected by the non-militants who work in a womanly way and therefore succeed. Even though hampered by the impression which the militants have put upon the mind of the working woman. These wives of working men, who found the two societies, men and women, are prejudiced against the enfranchisement of women on account of the notorious character of the leaders of the movement, whom they naturally associate with any Suffrage organization.

British women do not sympathize with the Militant leaders. It is true that Mrs. Pankhurst is fighting for a great object, the vote for women. But what does the overage woman care for the vote. The vast majority of British women do not care a straw for it, and would be loath to record their vote. The enlightened few would not materially affect the constitution of Parliament until they had awakened the working man's wife to the importance of the ballot. If she was asked about it, she would say that she had enough to do without going into politics. Therefore her vote would go to the party her husband favors. There is another side to the question. Is it not likely to cause strife between man and wife when they favor opposite parties? Much slier things than party politics have been the ruin of a home. And one can have decided party convictions.

Then again, if a romantic young woman of hazy political views had been one of two Parliamentary candidates, one is "young and handsome, but lacks experience, and the other is grey and sixty and overflowing with knowledge; who is going to get that vote? Not the man who merits it. Is he? Woman's mind is said to work on many wheels, and therefore many a woman might get to the voting booth before she has decided as to her choice and then if a grain of superstition is in her nature it is likely that she will close her eyes and trust to providence to guide her pencil to the right man.

Here the question at present stands, a little study in politics would no doubt fit the fair ones for the poll; and then why not give them a trial. This would settle the whole business at once, and why not?

The nude in art has rendered holy the beauty of woman. Moral as regards the body as obscene. It hides it with drapery. There is an infinite difference between the nude and the naked. The nude is pure. The great artist holds the mirror up to nature. Little souls are ashamed of nature.—Robert Ingersoll.
