COMB HONEY.

The production of comb honey, especially in pound sections, is understood by only a few bee keepers in Ontaio. It is here neither time nor flace to speak of methods, but rather of displays and their respective merits. If on a merchant's counter in Brock-ville, where large quantities of honey are handled, I place two one-pound and its product for foreign missions. You will never regret it. The hive referred to handed over to Mr. Living-ston 125 pounds of honey for that purpose.

Mr. O. L. Gibson, of Caintown, has an apiary varying from 40 to 50 colonies. He sells more colonies to different parties than any other person I know. How often have I heard him say to these beginners, "If these bees don't do well, and you think the fault is mine, bring the empty hive and disease, by dissolving the unred of parently Healthy Mon From passing a parently Healthy Mon From passing a few delta Examination for Life

First, and by far the most important, is to judge the comb, which should be rot only uniform in thickness and white, but the caps should be so smoothly blended that the cell lines are obliterated. White comb by itself, dark comb by itself, both in block, not scattered. Extracted, in groups. Then, if the judges take a groups. Then, if the judges take a sample of all lots of extracted and put them in 2 oz. white glass vials and set in rows; in an instant the awards can be made. "You want to settle your bill, do you?"

Pat replied in the affirmative.

"Well," said the merchant, "there is no need of my giving you: a receipt. See! I will cross your account off the book;" and suiting the action to the word he drew his pencil diagonally across the account. "That is a good receipt."

"And do you mane that that settles it?" exclaimed Fat.

"That settles it," said the merchant. "And yo're sure ye'll never be ask-in' me for it again?"

"We'll never ask you for it again," said the merchant decidedly.

"Faith, thin," said Pat, "I'll be after kapin' me money in me pocket, for

"Oh, well, I can rub that out!"
"Faith, now, and I thought the same," said Pat.
It is needless to add that Pat got his receipt.—Romance.

Running for Office.

A gentleman who is usually a home-keeping man, but who was induced to enter the race for a minor office early in the campaign, was "giving his experience" outside of meeting the other day. He said: "No, I shall never run for office again—not if I know it. For three weeks after I took the stump I did not see my family, and during my absence at that time a fellow who was shipping watermelons for me pocketed the returns for four carloads and skipped the country; a tramp rode away on one of my best horses; my youngest daughter ran away and married a fellow for me to support, and all of our mutual relatives came to congratulate my wife on the honor which had been conferred upon me and incidentally to spend the sum-Running for Office. which had been conferred upon n and incidentally to spend the sun mer. These three weeks cost me round numbers $400, to say nothing the son-in-law, who threatens to permanent, and the office for whi I was striving is worth just $600 year, I won't be elected, however, at I'm—glad of it! But this has been campaign of education to me, for in I have learned just how much of fool I really was!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Manager Was Mad. In a well-known bank in Edinburg

In a well-known bank in Edinburgh the clerks are presided over by a rather impetuous manager, whose violent fits of temper very often dominate his reason. For instance, the other day, he was wiring into one of them about his bad work.

"Look here, Jones," he thundered, "this won't do! These figures are a perfect disgrace to a clerk! I could get an office boy to make better figures than those, and I tell you I won't have it! Now look at that 5. It looks just like a 3. What do you mean, sir, by making such beastly figures? Explain?"

"I-er—I beg pardon, sir," suggested the trembling clerk, his heart fluttertrembling clerk, his heart flutter terribly; "but—er—well, you—s, it is a 3."

Willie-How long are you going to visit us?"
Aunt Jemima—I haven't the Teast idea. Why do you ask, Willie?
"Mother wanted to know."

He—"You looked charming standing there on the pier. What were you isn'ing for?"
She—"Compliments."

And Cought Them.

I like this kind old sunny soul, Whom nothing can annoy; His pleasant smile is e'er the same, To fill my heart with Joy. I like his quaint, ungainly shape; I like his big, round face, Although he's clumsy through and through, To me he's full of grace.

Indeed, he's sweet enough to eat-
