CONTROL OF SWARMING
(Experimental Farm's Note)

Swarming is the bees' natural method of increase, and the instinct to swarm is particularly strong under the extremely favorable conditions for bee activity of the Canadian spring and summer.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

This is a Short Letter, But It Proves the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bothwell, Ont.—"I was weak and run down, had no appetite and was nervous. The nurse who took care of me told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I am getting strong. I recommend your medicine to my friends, and you may use my testimonial."—Mrs. W. J. Brady, R. R. 2, Bothwell, Ont.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old-fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence, and as it contains no narcotics or harmful drugs it is a safe medicine for women.

If you want special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read, and answered by women only.

The control of swarming is the greatest problem in bee-keeping. To encourage work in the hive and to discourage the desire to swarm, plenty of room, both in the brood chamber and in the super and large entrances should be given to all colonies as soon as conditions are favorable, but these measures will not always be enough to prevent swarming in many places, especially in the north.

select parentage. In this way a young queen is obtained which will not swarm, and, besides, will be much more prolific in the fall and next year than the old queen, and will be less likely to swarm next year. This plan, however, causes a certain amount of loafing until the new queen starts laying. This loafing can be much reduced by introducing a ripe queen cell at the time the queen is removed, and if this is done early enough, before any preparations for swarming have been started, the bees are unlikely to build further queen cells. Where, however, one prefers to use the surer method, only those colonies that are actually preparing to swarm should be treated, and some means for quickly ascertaining if a colony is building queen-cells in preparation for swarming should be employed. One of the best of these is to have the brood nest occupy two chambers, and then by prying up the upper chamber one can see at a glance if the queen cells are being built along the lower edge of the combs in this chamber.

In many parts of southern Ontario, southern Quebec and similar regions the desire to swarm is strong only during the first two or three weeks of the honey flow from clover, and the separation of queen and brood by a queen excluder, the queen being put into a lower chamber containing only empty combs and foundation, may be enough to tide the colony over this period. Another good plan that may be enough to prevent swarming in this region is to use two brood chambers and confine the queen in the lower one early in the honey flow, at which time the combs in this chamber usually contain a large number of empty cells.—F. W. L. Staden, apairist.

The Shah Travels.

The Shah of Persia is on his travels. London will see him and keep him, apparently, for some little time. Europe has memories of the peregrinations of other shahs. They are quaint memories, some of them. There was Nasr-ed-Din, in 1872, and there was Ahmed Mirza, many years later. There would have been a visit, in 1894, on the part of Nasr-ed-Din, but for a Brussels journalist. It happened that, on the Shah's traveling programme becoming known, a Brussels daily published an article which seemed to prognosticate a cool welcome in Belgium. The Minister of Justice of the period thought fit to give the article the publicity of judicial proceedings. The writer was summoned before a Brabant tribunal, but he was exonerated. But the verdict had the immediate effect of keeping Nasr-ed-Din at home in Teheran.

THE REASON.

Method of Orchard Cultivation
(Experimental Farm's Note)

The method or system of cultivation to be adopted may be varied to some extent, to meet local conditions. In reality, however, all systems should be and in most cases are, a slight modification of the "clean cultivation and cover crop system."

The clean cultivation method calls for all the ground under and around the trees to be plowed and frequently harrowed until around July 1st.

This system has much to recommend it, viz. (1) Maximum conservation of soil moisture; (2) excellent conditions for liberation of plant food, especially nitrogen; (3) slightness and cleanliness of the orchard and (4) control of insect pests.

In connection with this, either fall or spring plowing may be practiced, the former, however, only in those localities with a favorable enough winter to so permit. The great secret of success with any system of cultivation designed to conserve moisture and liberate plant food is to get on the land as early in spring as possible, otherwise, if the orchard is not plowed until late, most of the advantages of cultivation are lost.

Modifications of the above consist of leaving a strip of sod about four feet in width next to the trees. In old orchards, where it is difficult to get close to the trees this may be practiced successfully, in which case the grass is cut once or twice during

The sensation of taste, while of common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acidity—which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inopportune temperature; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped, to identify substances placed in his mouth.

To Wear With Sports Suits.

When furs are laid aside one wears a smart scarf. And to go with the ever-popular sports suit the new camel's hair scarfs seem especially intended. They come all the way from England, are very fine, very soft and very light of weight. Tan is the most fashionable color at this minute, and these scarfs are made with fringed ends and very generous as to width. The tan, one must add, is but the predominating color, for the scarfs are finished at the ends with two-color block designs.

RECIPES FOR ASPARAGUS

With asparagus getting better and cheaper daily in our local markets, novel ways of serving this delicious vegetable will prove helpful to the home caterer who desires the greatest possible amount of variety in planning her daily menus.

ASPARAGUS COOKED IN MILK.

Scrape the scales from the stalks and cut off the tough ends. Then cut the asparagus into inch lengths, place in a saucepan and add boiling salted milk to cover. Simmer very gently (about 20 minutes) until tender and the milk is almost absorbed. Lay the asparagus on hot buttered toast and pour over sufficient hot cream to moisten; season the cream with melted butter, salt and paprika.

ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE.

Blend together half a teaspoonful of salt and onion juice and add a quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika, five tablespoonfuls of vegetable oil, three tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar and one tablespoonful of shredded parsley. Have ready the sliced edible portions of a bunch of cooked asparagus (carefully drained), pour over the dressing and set in the ice-box for two or three hours. Taste the dressing over the asparagus several times. Serve plain or on crisp lettuce leaves.

ASPARAGUS SALAD.

Chill the cooked, drained vegetable. Use six stalks for each individual salad service and pass the bundle of stalks through a ring cut from a green pepper. Lay the bundle on three crisp lettuce leaves, spread with boiled or mayonnaise dressing, and garnish with chopped hard-boiled eggs, capers and tiny pink radishes.

ANOTHER ASPARAGUS SALAD.

Arrange the cooked tips on a bed of lettuce leaves and pour over sufficient French dressing to moisten. Garnish with squares of firm tomato jelly and sliced stuffed olives. In cooking asparagus the scales should always be removed from the stalks. It takes time and a little trouble to do this, but the housewife will be well repaid for her effort.

A Day in Spring.

O day most rare, accept my salutation! Dame Sorrow dwells not in the world with you; But, summing her brood in trepidation, She flees before your cloudless eye of blue.

Beneath her hat wings how her children hover! At first they knew that God's own glories light Would all their little nothingness discover And show them one with emptiness and night.

And what is night but shadow of this bubble, This storied, rainbow globe we call our earth. Shot through with shifting gleams of joy and trouble, And struck with stars of song and moons of mirth?

But when there comes a day like this we mortals—Behold that City of the Open Portals, And know in truth there shall be no night there. Feeling God's warmth around us everywhere—
