When firing the United States Springfield Rifle, Model 1903, calibre 30-30, at what distance is the bullet ever taken by the sound of the discharge?

If the regular Model 1906 cartridge is used, the bullet will be overtaken by the sound at 2,040 yards approximately.

What is the approximate change in the initial velocity for each change of ten degrees in temperature?

Please let me know the muzzle energy of the .45 Colt Automatic as used in the U. S. Army and how you think its energy compares with that of the 9 mm Luger Pistol at the muzzle?

The muzzle energy of the .45 Colt Automatic is 335 foot pounds, that of the Luger is 321 foot pounds. The .45 Automatic is therefore the more powerful.

Will you please let me know how English Cordite powder and Rigby's Nitro Powder compare in energy with our best American Smokeless powders?

Cordite is a very powerful powder but this question cannot be answered very satisfactorily as so many factors enter into the discussion.

B. P. Jr., Plano, Cal.
Will you kindly describe the "Professional Drop" as spoken of in revolver shooting—its use, etc.

I give it up. I have asked everybody I know of and do not seem to find anybody who knows anything about a "Professional Drop." Can some of our readers furnish any information on this subject?

H. L. Tooton, Mont.
Can an automatic .22 rifle be relied upon to shoot as accurately as a good .22 repeating rifle?

Yes, if .22 smokeless cartridges are used in the .22 calibre repeater, its ballistics are very like the automatic. Lemok and semi-smokeless cartridges are, however, considerably more powerful.

Will hollow point cartridges for the above mentioned automatic .22 carry up as far and as well as ordinary solidpoint .22 auto cartridges, and which of the two contain the more powder?

Hollow point .22 calibre cartridges do not shoot quite as accurately or with as great range as the solid bullets. The difference is very slight, however, and has no effect at ordinary hunting ranges.

G. F. N., Milwaukee, Wis.
Has the .303 Savage cartridge more killing power than the .32-40?

The .303 Savage cartridge is more powerful than the .32-40 High Power, which I suppose is the cartridge to which you refer. The difference is approximately 100 ft. lbs. in energy.

Does the action on .32-40 feed cartridges better and faster on account of the tapering shape?

No, this has no effect.
Has the .32 Calibre Remington pump action any advantages over the lever action—can it be handled faster than the lever action?

This is a question for you to decide. Antilocking or self-loading actions are the fastest, slide actions come next, lever actions third and bolt actions fourth.

Which one of these three calibre has the most killing power?

This can be best answered by giving the muzzle energies: .303 Savage 1658 foot pounds; .32 Remington 1682 foot pounds; .32-40 High Power 1558 foot pounds.

What one of these three calibre would be the best for all around use in this part of the country?

This depends entirely on what game you expect to hunt. If moose, for instance, considerable power is of course necessary.
