ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD

Saints' Devotion To The Sacred Heart

After many devout souls had venerated the Sacred Heart of Jesus, with sincere devotion, in the solitude of quiet life, as seen in the lives of SS. Augustine, Bernard, Bonaventure, Thomas of Aquin, Francis de Sales, Ignatius, Clara, Gertrude, Mechtilde, Catharine of Siena, Theresa and others, our divine Saviour willed that His heart's infinite love should be recognized by all men, and be kindled in cold hearts by a new fire of love. For this end He made use of a feeble, obscure instrument, that all the world might know that the devotion to His loving heart, previously entirely unknown, was his own work. This instrument, disregarded by the world, was one who shone before God in all the radiance of the most sublime virtues, the nun Margaret Alacoque of the order of the Visitation of Mary, at Paray, in Burgundy. In the year 1675, while she was one day in prayer before the Blessed Sacrament, our Lord appeared to her, and pointing to His heart which He showed to her, surrounded with flames, encircled by the Cross, encircled with a crown of thorns, and pierced with a gaping wound. He said to her: "Behold this heart, which has loved mankind so much, and which receives from men only ingratitude and coldness in return for its love. My desire is that you should make reparation to My heart for this ingratitude, and induce others also to make reparation." Our Lord then designated the Friday after the Octave of Corpus Christi as the special day for this duty. In several subsequent apparitions our Divine Lord repeated this injunction, and made the most unbounded promises in favor of all who should apply themselves to this office of reparation to His Sacred Heart. The following are some of His promises:

1. I will give them all the graces necessary for their state of life.
2. I will establish peace in their families.
3. I will console them in all their pains and trials.
4. I will be their assured refuge in life and especially in death.
5. I will shed abundant blessings upon all their undertakings.
6. Sinners shall find in My Heart an infinite ocean of mercy.
7. Lukewarm souls shall be rendered fervent.
8. Fervent souls shall rise rapidly to greater perfection.
9. I will bless those houses where the image of My Heart shall be exposed and honored.
10. I will give to priests the gift of moving the hardest hearts.
11. Persons who propagate this devotion shall have their names inscribed on My Heart, never to be effaced from it.

Margaret obeyed, but found everywhere the greatest opposition, actual sneers and prosecution, even from her Sisters in religion, until finally, with the aid of her Divine Spouse, she succeeded as mistress of novices, in bringing her young charge to the veneration of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. But this did not content her zeal; although opposition continued, she strove to fulfill the command of Jesus, who assisted her by at last changing the hardened hearts of the nuns and inflaming them with the same love of His Sacred Heart. This devotion soon spread from the convent through the adjoining dioceses, where confraternities in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus arose, and Pope Clement XIII, after causing the strictest investigation to be made, commanded the Festival of the Sacred Heart of Jesus to be observed throughout the Catholic Church on the first Friday after the Octave of Corpus Christi.

The memory of our purest and noblest joys remains with us like a fountain of perpetual youth, while that of the wrong we have done is the only pain which follows us with unrelenting persistence—Brilliant from Spalding.

Betting and Gambling

(Ave Maria)

One of the most common and reprehensible practices of various religious sects in this country and elsewhere is that of denouncing as inherently immoral and sinful certain habits, customs, or acts which are really in their nature, indifferent or un-moral. The centuries fallacy of confounding the abuse of a thing with its use is still in vogue among dozens of religious denominations, and to the multitudinous sins forbidden by the divine Decalogue is added a lengthy appendix of man-made sins, certainly not binding on enlightened Christian consciences—at least outside the sects which specifically prohibit them.

The extravagance committed by the straight-laced Puritans, on both sides of the Atlantic, in this matter of denouncing and forbidding as immoral dozens of practices which, in themselves, were as innocent and harmless as the whistling of a merry boy or the lively chatter of a group of school girls, did much to undermine true morality by prompting the general hypocrisy for a time, and then leading to a reaction from unduly restricted liberty to unrestrained license. Smoking, dancing and card-playing, for instance, are not intrinsically evil; and while excessive indulgence in any one of them may become an offense against morality, the possibility of their legitimate use, else the possibility of a man's becoming a glutton would justify his being forcibly restrained from eating his ordinary meals.

The difference between the non-Catholic method of dealing with questions of this kind is graphically illustrated in a Catholic Truth Society pamphlet which published several years ago, fell under our notice again the other day. It bears the title "Modern Problems and Catholic Principles," and contained summarized statements of genuine Christian doctrine concerning no fewer than fourteen topics of present day interest. One such topic is that which forms the title of this paper; and premising that the author of the pamphlet is Father Joseph Keating, S. J., we reproduce what he has to say of betting and gambling:

General definition.—The risking of something of value or some uncertain issue, or as the emphatic assertion of some personal view in the hope of gain if the issue be favorable or the view prove correct.

Moral Aspect.—A contract lawful in itself, but very liable to abuse. It is lawful because, as he who owns a thing may give it away freely or for less than its value to another, so also he may risk the loss of it on the chance of gaining something in return. How easily the practice may be abused all human experience shows.

Conditions for lawfulness.—(a) The thing staked must really in all the circumstances be at the free disposal of him who stakes it; (b) this act must be voluntary; (c) there must be no fraud or undue advantage on either side.

Dangers of the Practice.—It really excites the passion of avarice, the desire for gain disproportionate to need or to effort, and it lends itself to every sort of trickery. These abuses are so likely to occur and are actually so prevalent that in the interests of public order, the State rightly restricts opportunities for gambling. In view of the great evil it causes, the State would be justified in going further by prohibiting, for instance, the publication of betting news.

Remedies.—(a) Clear recognition of the permissible limits of the practice; (b) avoidance of wrong views which defeat their end by confusing the moral sense—i.e., the classifying of betting and gambling as not less evil than lying and theft; (c) obedience to the civil law; (d) obedience to the Christian law which teaches moderation in the desire for wealth.

It is entirely safe to say that the foregoing brief discussion of

HALF THE ILLS OF LIFE ARE CAUSED BY CONSTIPATION.

When the bowels become constipated, the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, sourness of the stomach, belching of wind, heartburn, water brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will clear away all the effects and poisonous matter which has collected in the system, give you a free, easy and natural motion of the bowels every day, and the sluggish liver works in a free and healthy vitality to the entire abdominal tract.

Mrs. J. M. L. writes: "I have been troubled with constipation for the last two years. I have tried numerous treatments, but have never been relieved by anything until I used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, which are helping me wonderfully."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a tin. For sale by all druggists and dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

quests at ease and teaching a lesson in tactfulness to their less thoughtful friends.

The surest test, most probably of true, innate refinement is one's conduct at table, and truly, if noble manners should at one time more than another be cultivated, it is when one must needs attend to nature's purely material demands.

There is a fineness and delicacy not conned from books on table etiquette, not used on formal occasions, and laid aside with party gowns, but which is practiced as strictly when eating privately as when banqueting with a throng, that proclaims the true gentleman and gentle woman.

The well-bred man or woman makes no remarks about the food, nor pretends to notice how much, how little or in what manner others are eating. They endeavor to put every one at ease, and to make the meal hour one of the most pleasant and refined of the day.

"Are you going to take any summer boarders this year?" asked a neighbor.

"Not unless they work in disguise as farm hands," replied Farmer Courttassel.

Mary Ovington, Jasper Ont writes:—"My mother had a badly sprained arm. Nothing we used did her any good. Then father got Hagyard's Yellow Oil and it cured mother's arm in a few days Price 25 cents."

"My dear you will have to check this passion of yours for shopping."

"All right dear just give me the cheque."

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES. WOULD HOLD HEAD DOWN FACE WAS SUCH A SIGHT.

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, the nose, the chin and other parts of the body.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and that is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of that grand old blood purifier Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about 18. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town I would hold my head down when I saw anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion."

I recommend it to everyone who is in a rundown condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is all the face is clear."

The Dog that Saved A Soldier's Life

Attached to a French command was a dog named Michael, larger, stronger, more intelligent than the others and of a gentle nature that made him a general favorite. Michael, although most "sociable" centered his particular affections upon a young French soldier named Henri. Every day at the soup hour Michael would appear carrying a tin can and place it beside Henri, who would fill it as he did his own, and they would dine together.

The day came, however, when Henri failed to return, and as the men stumbled back again to safety, Michael scanned with anxious eyes each pale haggard face, his sensitive nostrils quivering with dread.

When the last man had been accounted for and Henri was still missing, the animal darted toward the battlefield and after some time returned, greatly excited and carrying an old ball glove which belonged to his friend. He could scarcely wait for the attendants to bring a litter before he started off again his great intelligent eyes imploring them to hurry.

In a remote part of the field they found the young fellow lying still and cold. After a hasty examination the attendants left him for dead, hurrying away to succor the living, but Michael refused to be convinced. Again and again he returned for assistance, but in vain, so he mounted his solitary guard, his face almost humanly expressive of grief.

The attack took place about sundown and it was not until late that night that comparative quiet settled down upon the trenches.

Suddenly the moon flashed from behind a cloud and the alert sentinel peered sharply about, then brought his rifle to his shoulder.

Not twenty feet away creeping slowly towards the trenches, but halting abruptly every minute, loomed a large dark object. The sentry advanced cautiously, finger on trigger, demanded curtly, "Who goes there?" followed by a stifled exclamation of "Michael!"

Michael it was, gasping, panting, but still the same old dog Michael—but not alone. Behind him, parts of his uniform literally torn away by the dog's teeth, lay Henri, dragged from the battlefield, inch by inch, by the devoted animal. And miracle of miracles, the boy was actually breathing.

How the animal had accomplished such a herculean task and escaped the vigilant eyes of the field attendants will forever remain a mystery, but suffice to say that little fragile-looking Henri ultimately recovered to challenge death once more at the front.

McKinley's Little Act Is Lesson in Manners

A beautiful little story is told of the late President and Mrs. McKinley, who were entertaining at dinner in the White House a plain old couple they had known and loved in Ohio.

A costly fruit was passed, and instead of taking one piece, the old man helped himself plentifully, his wife following suit. A smile passed around the guests, but the distinguished host and his lady were equal to the occasion. They helped themselves even to a second portion of the
