IS HE NOBLE ?

BY QUILLON. Is he noble—is he gifted?
Is he one among the wise?
Does he toil, with spirit radient?
Does he wish all men to rise?
Does he work with brilliant lervour?
Does he see a brighter day?
Has his soul a beam of beauty.
Like the first rich beam of May?

Does he see a golden glimmer
Of a nobler purer age—
In his feelings like a poet,
In his morals like a sage?
Then l'li be his proud companion,
Over land and over sea!
And, united in our mission,
Live united, heart and hand!

And behold the roof of heaven, Like a jewelled azure sea,
Lovely, waniess, and eternal,
Type of what this world might be!
And to teach the world grea lessons
Of delight, should be our aim;
And we'd wake its deepest feelings,
To embrace one faith and name!

And the chords of all true sympathies And the chords of all true sympathies.
Should tremble like the falwers:
And the heart grow ripe with blosson.
Of friendship's hallowed powers!
And we'd spreadsweet creeds, all glo
Make the Beautifut more known,
And the Christian clasp the Pagan,
As the father clasps his own!

But we'd curb the palaced tyrant. In his thirst for human gore—
Make his deeds of rapine [ewer,
And his kets of kitdness more!
And the world should see that glory
That illumes the prophet's pen
And its iles and beauteous kingdoms
Boast a happi r race of men!
