Off For The North.

The steel fleet of ships sailed this morning for the icefields on their annual sealing hunt. When the clock ticked off 8 the steamers passed out the Narrows, being witnessed by hundreds of people who lined the waterfront. That the sealers will meet with a full measure of success on their perilous voyage and return with bumper trips of seals will be the warmest wish of all.

WOODEN FLEET LEFT.

Messages were received yesterday that the steamers Erik, Diana, Kite and Newfoundland sailed from St. John's on Monday for the Eagle and Bloodhound from Fogo.

Marystown Notes.

The firm of G. C. Harris are busily engaged getting their bankers ready for the fishery.

Mr. Joseph and V. J. Baker and their families will be leaving early next month for Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, where the vintend to reside in the future. Mr. J. Baker has three sons residing at Moose Jaw for the past year and they are doing well in the building and constructing business. Mr. J. Baker will be a great loss to this place, as he was always one of the leading business men, and very often foremost in Church matters and other works. The Messrs. Baker are hard and honest workers and we have no doubt that they will make good in the new country.

Mr. John Farrell will erect a saw mill in the early spring on the old site, formerly occupied by Mr. Joseph Baker's mill. Mr. Farrell has a thorough knowledge of the milling business, which leads us to think that he should make a success of it. The schr. St. Clair, which sailed from here early in February, is doing well with the fish on the Western shore, and if the weather holds fair for the month of March, Captain Walsh will bring home a good trip. Most of the men are shipped here now for the bank fishery, the average wages being about two hundred dollars and the shares over.

Yours truly, P.F.C. Marystown, March 10, 1913.

ON THE WAY HOME.—Mr. J. P. Kieley, manager of the Nickel left Montreal last night for home, bringing with him new machinery, the latest on the market for the Nickel. He has also engaged new talent for both the Nickel and Casino and both will open on Easter Monday night.

The Mission at Placentia.

Special to Evening Telegram. PLACENTIA, Last Evening. Mission opened here in the Parish Church and is being conducted by Fathers McPhail and Holland. At all the masses, instructions and sermons, the Church is crowded. The Children's Mission closed this morning when about four hundred received Holy Communion. The hours of mass each morning are 6 o'clock, 7.30 and 9 o'clock. The Rev. Fathers express great pleasure at the large attendance at all the exercises of the mission. No fewer than twelve and fifteen hundred being present on each occasion.

Sacred Concert.

To-night in the College Hall, Mr. Allen, assisted by Misses Herder, Storey and Anderson, Messrs. A. W. Mews, Frank Seymour and Ruggles, the members of the Anglican Cathedral Choir and the members of the chorus who are now practicing Handel's "Messiah," will give a grand Sacred Concert. The programme which is made up of solos, anthems, choruses, a cello and a piano solo, is well balanced and all who like good music, rendered in a faultless manner would do well to attend. The concert is under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson.

Supreme Court.

(Before the Chief Justice.) Henry Patten & Co., Ltd., vs. Henry Ryan et al.—This was an action to recover $750, the price of goods sold and delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendants.

Mr. Hunt, for the plaintiffs. Mr. Cliff, K.C., for the defendant. Albert Rogers, asked for leave to withdraw the defence. Mr. Hunt moved for judgment. It was ordered judgment be entered for the plaintiff, with costs.

Cape Report.

Special to Evening Telegram. CAPE RACE, To-day. Wind west, light breeze, fine; considerable slob ice after last night's frost. The s.s. D. P. Ingraham passed west at 5.45 p.m. yesterday. A bark, whose signals cannot be distinguished, is in sight about 10 miles eastward. Bar, 29.18; ther, 27.

Hr. Grace Notes.

A family of blackbirds (robins) apparently decided last fall to remain here the winter, and find a vacant house on the Carbonar Road, they took possession and could be seen every fine day the winter leaving their home in the morning and returning before night. They entered through a broken glass in one of the windows.

Mrs. Noseworthy, of the telephone station, Southside, informs us that a very old resident of that settlement passed away this morning in his 83rd year—Mr. Richard Sheppard. The deceased had only been ill a few days and his end was painless and calm. He leaves three daughters and two sons to mourn his death.

Mumps and Whooping Cough are now prevalent in this neighborhood. Not only is the former attacking the children, but several middle-aged people are now confined to their rooms or beds suffering from an attack of this malady.

Mr. E. Williams, Superintendent of the U. T. Electric Co. left by to-day's train for a five or six weeks visit to New York and Boston. No doubt we will have some improvements in our electric light and telephone system when Mr. Williams returns. His friends will wish him a pleasant and prosperous trip.

There died on Saturday last with relatives near Banerman Lake, Susanah Northcott, widow of the late Patrick Northcott, of the South Side. The old lady had reached the age of 85 years, and the whole of that long life, with the exception of the last few months had been spent on the South Side. The remains were interred on Monday at the R.C. cemetery.

A Great Big Fizzle!

Morris Meeting Attended by About 100 Sealers And All The Heelers That Could be Mustered—Premier Speechless With Chagrin—The Handwriting on The Wall.

The Daily News, as it would say itself, must have been dealing in "hieroglyphic sounds" for the sake of "terrific effects" in its issue this morning when it declares that juveniles entered the ranks of the sealers monster parade under the auspices of the R. P. U. last night. They led off by saying the parade was "a large one, and then, of course, as per orders received, try to belittle this great demonstration of fishermen." Morris' Meeting in the British Hall was the worst fizzle ever witnessed in the annals of such affairs. It was filled with city heelers and political hangers on, and Morris was so surprised and chagrined at the absence of the bone and sinew that he could not speak coherently, and the meeting was the flattest affair held in St. John's for years. Many citizens left saying, "we thought it was to be a sealers meeting but we saw no sealers there." This meeting proved to be Morris' Belsnessar's Feast. His political doom is sealed.

Notes of Long Ago.

In the meantime the day of our heroine's marriage approached, and was duly solemnized and lavishly celebrated. The union proved happy in the highest degree, and they made their home upon the estate of the bride's forefathers; and there, amid its scenery, and 'neath the shadow of its old castle, the pathway of life ran smoothly for some three or four years. Then came the greatest joy that can come into the home: the joy that crowns the sanctity of the fireside; the advent of the dearer words of Father and Mother. It was a little daughter that blessed the happy couple, and while life had been happy and happy before, it was even more so now; for there was a tender life to be cared for, a destiny and a character to be cherished.

Up to that there was no thought of leaving Ireland, but changes come in to every home, and the unexpected often happens. So it came about that among the many who were emigrating to the Western Hemisphere, and who were breaking the family ties of generations past were our heroine and her husband. Thousands were annually going to America; some had capital and some had not; some went by force of circumstances; while others did so from choice, for purposes of business and speculation. It was from the latter standpoint that our friends decided to make their home in the New World. They considered the matter well, and the more they did so, the more they felt the need to emigrate. Like others, they had friends who had gone before them, and it was only natural that they should seek to be near them, as the emigrants in the same the world over; and while men are divided by classes and creeds, there is underlying it all, that feeling of brotherhood, which tells us that we are one, and that One is our Father, and One is God.

It so happened that some friends of our heroine had emigrated to Newfoundland; and so it was that in their selection of a country in the Western Hemisphere, Newfoundland was their choice. As we have said, the entire marriage was happy, but the estates belonged to the bride, and it was necessary that she administer them personally; and while this feature of their business affairs gave prominence to the fact that she was a woman, under date or place in a secondary position her good husband. But still she was the factor and her word was law. Yet, as the years passed, and down to the very end of the chapter there was harmony and mutual affection. This is not always the case, for very often property estranges the affections, and even the sacred ties of husband and wife may be sacrificed upon the cold altar of dollars and cents. Having fully decided to emigrate, their first duty was to dispose of their estate, and turn it into ready cash. Our heroine's share of it was very large, but having decided to sell it they made a sacrifice; and gave it for the sum of £10,000, or fifty thousand dollars, a property that was certainly worth double the amount at that date; and which at the present time would be a fortune worthy a Carnegie. But the sale was honourable, and was duly ratified, and the sum of £10,000 paid over to our fair lady.

With the estate disposed of, the first break came in the family life, and the first of an Irish race which had for centuries been prominent in the annals of Irish history, were about to sever their interest and make a home, and probably a name, in the far West. But such has ever been the way of progress, and somebody had to pay the price; somebody had to come and colonize the New World; and among the many nationalities that to-day people the North American Continent none have surpassed the Anglo-Saxon people, and no sons have been more enterprising than those who came from Scotland; no fathers more faithful than those who came from England; and no daughters more beautiful or wives more virtuous than those who came from Ireland. It was the industry, character, and faith of the Anglo-Saxon people that really gave birth to the American nation; and the best hope of the future of our Northern lands lies in the hands of the Anglo-Saxon race.

The first important step to be settled in connection with emigrating was that of procuring a passage; and one hundred years ago the matter was none too easily accomplished. When a ship was procured, even at best there was great inconvenience, and no little hardship to be endured. But with an abundance of means as our company had, and with ample time in which to make a selection, they were able to embark upon one of the best vessels of the times, and to procure fairly good quarters on board. But even this meant a small cramped cabin and a tedious and uncertain voyage; but there being no better accommodation, nor any better means of travelling at that date, these inconveniences were not minded; and what we now look upon as obsolete and out of date, was then taken as very good and up to date. And so the little company embarked, and with quite a band of emigrants they sailed from the harbour of Cork.

Rossley's New Lamp.

There has just been imported for Rossley's Theatre, a beautiful new lamp for his new picture machine, which now completes one of the finest constructed pieces of machinery ever put together. The machine is absolutely fireproof, and the only one in existence this side of the Atlantic. Many people when they knew the expense Mr. Rossley went to, thought it foolish and extravagant of him to do so. But safety for his patrons was foremost in his mind, and therefore determined when he had one imported from London it should be the best brains could invent. Any person is at liberty to inspect the operator, Mr. Skinner will only be too delighted to show it.

Marine Notes.

The schr. Mildred, fish laden for Brazil, sails to-morrow. The s.s. City of Sydney is due this afternoon from Halifax. The schr. Harold left St. Lawrence on Tuesday, for Gibraltar, with 3,200 qtls. of fish. The bark, Clutha, sailed for Pernambuco yesterday.
