What Has Helped You?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON.

A group of us drifted into a conversation the other day about the bits of poetry or wise or beautiful sayings which had helped us the most.

Each member had at least one to contribute. Indeed I think there are a few people who have not felt the restraining or comforting or impelling force of some such utterance which they have read and stored up in their minds, or rather, hearts.

Sometimes it's from the Bible or Shakespeare; sometimes it's just a sentence from a magazine or a verse from an obscure poet. It isn't always the greatness of the thing, it's just its appeal in each particular case.

An Invitation to My Reader Friends.

Our talk set me to thinking. It was such an interesting and inspiring conversation that I wished my reader friends could gather round the fire with us and chime in. And then I thought "Why not?"

Why not? Don't you think it would be interesting to have a round-the-fire talk on this subject, reader friends? Tell me the verse or the sentence which has helped you and I'll ass it on. It may help someone else as much. Who knows?

What Some of Us Liked Best.

Just to start the ball a-rolling let me tell you what some of the members of our group contributed.

"The world is too much with us—Late and soon, getting and spending We lay waste our powers."

—Wordsworth.

Incidentally I happen to know that this is Mrs. Taff's favorite poem.

"I am yours for everything expect to do you harm."

—Mrs. Browning to her husband.

"Too be useful to be lonely and too busy to be sad."

—Author unknown. The motto of the lady-who-always-knows-a-thing.

Where the race of men go by. The men who are good and the men who are bad.

As good and as bad as I.

"I would not sit in the scorners' seat Nor hurl the critic's ban. Let me live in a house by the side of the road And be the friend of man."

—Sam Walter Foss.

"Whereupon, Oh King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—St. Paul.

These are quoted from memory, so I trust you will pardon any inaccuracies and will join us round the fire with your favorite quotation.

Questions and Answers.

Question. Do you think it is fair for my father to expect me to give him part of my earnings? I am eighteen years old. I live at home and earn six dollars a week?

Reply. That depends on whether your father needs your help. If he does I shouldn't think you'd wait for him to "expect it." Most fathers have a hard enough time making their salaries cover all household needs until their children grow up without continuing to feed and house them free after they are earning money, so that they may have all their earnings for personal luxuries. If he needs it pitch in and help and be glad you can. Of course you can't give much but every little helps. If he doesn't need it that's quite another matter.

Question. D. F. W. asks, "Do you think I could use a prescription a doctor gave my sister for headaches. I have had severe headaches recently and she suggests I use her remedy. It seems to me, however, that I have been exchanging of prescriptions advised against."

Reply. It is more than possible that your headache springs from quite a different source from your sister's. Her medicine might not help you might even harm you. See a doctor by all means.

A Happy Child In Just A Few Hours

When cross, constipated or if feverish give "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold; or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomachache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Self-colored and dull gold soutache are used in carrying out the military effects of coats.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

Is a Short Man a Better Fighter?

Dr. M. S. Pembrey, lecturer on physiology at Guy's Hospital, opened an interesting discussion at the Royal Sanitary Institute, Buckingham Palace-road, on the question of Tall versus Short Men for the army.

A typical Scot, said Dr. Pembrey, would be considered a tall Welshman, in support of his contention that a man might be considered tall when his height was four or five inches greater than that of the average of his countrymen. The difference in height between a tall and a short man was due chiefly to the longer legs of the former, but height depended upon the correlated activity of certain glands which produced internal secretions and extremes.

The essential organs, Doctor Pembrey added, were in the head and trunk, and these were often better developed in the short man than in the tall man, the weight of the brain being relatively greater in the short man and the reaction time not so long. Tall men of full proportions, he contended, were heavy and often slow, and there were strong physiological reasons for the greater agility and activity of the small man, who did not suffer from the mechanical disadvantages of height and weight. The small man had a greater capacity for work, endurance, and stronger resistance to disease.

Judging from the fighting capacity of tall and short races and from the fighting capacity of tall and short men of the same race, Dr. Pembrey summed up in favor of the short man, though he modified his remarks by warning his hearers to beware of the danger of rushing to extremes.

In the discussion which followed, the verdict was given in favor of the short man as against the tall.

Fads and Fashions.

Flower wreathed toques are very welcome after the long run of black velvet hats.

Dull gold and metal soutache embroidery are being used on chic tailored costumes.

Revers and waistcoats of linen, striped or plain, are seen in the new white serge jackets.

Grass linen blouses have twine decoration and are worn with sand-colored covert skirts.

High stand-up ruffles of tulle and neck ruchings of lace are among the revivals in neckwear.

Some of the silk dresses have the long peasant blouse, belted, and they are high in the collar.

Some of the best Paris dress-makers are cutting their blouses low in the neck—round or square.

There has been a tremendous swing from the tube-like skirt to the picturesque skirt that follows.

And now we have torpedo-shaped toques of silk and straw. A single rose or a single bow trims them.

Warm russet and golden brown, shot with rose, purple or blue, are among the new changeable hues.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

The baby's little nose is often a source of great annoyance to him. If it becomes stopped up so that the child has the snuffles. Sometimes this becomes so severe that he cannot nurse as his nose is so stopped up that he cannot breathe when his mouth is closed over the nipple.

In such cases the mother should very firmly twist a little absorbent cotton on the end of a wooden toothpick and dipping this in a solution of one heaping teaspoonful of boracic acid dissolved in one pint of boiling water, she should very gently remove any secretions she may find there.

After this is done, she should drop into each nostril some olive, or still better, some liquid alboline, so that this will trickle far back into the nose and clear out a passage through which the baby may breathe.
