THOUGHTS ON VOICES.

Have you a pleasant voice? It is so often asserted that anyone can make his or her voice pleasing if not musical, and yet how often we hear voices that are very far from pleasing.

Of course our commonest fault is the nasal voice. Physicians ascribe this to adenoids, but I think a great many people who don't have adenoids do have high-pitched voices just because they place their voices wrongly.

When the Pitch Rises. The high-pitched voice is the voice of excitement. Notice how quickly the pitch of a voice rises when the speaker of it is angry or excited. It is not because we are angry or excited that our voices are too high-pitched; the people out of ten could drop their voices from one to a half dozen notes with advantage.

Try it out on your own voice and you will find the result. Perhaps I feel strongly on this subject because I do so love a contralto voice. The large majority of music records are either of the soprano, alto, or contralto voices. Tenor comes next in popularity, and then the bass and the baritone. I love a contralto singing voice, I love a contralto speaking voice even more. There is something about it, so quiet, so soothing about it.

I Don't Mind a Husky Voice. Personally, I even carry my like of a husky voice so far that I don't mind a voice that is a bit husky.

union is expressed on all sides that she is utterly unsuitable. She is without sanitary arrangements and her passenger accommodations are nil. Women travelling by her would be subjected to all kinds of indignities. Considering the large number of people who travel up and down this route throughout the season, it is hoped a suitable boat will be placed here. Even the Ethie last year was unable to satisfactorily cope with the situation. On more than one occasion we witnessed more than 200 passengers on her at one time. There was scarcely standing room upon her decks. A steamer of the Genoa class is what the needs of this coast call for.

30,000 Jews Parade.

TORONTO, May 10.—The greatest Jewish demonstration that has ever taken place in Toronto was staged in an immense parade through the streets yesterday afternoon and a meeting last night in Massey Hall that was attended by about 3,500 persons. The demonstration was meant as an expression of gratitude to Great Britain for the decision of the San Remo Conference to restore Palestine to the Jews. In the parade were about 30,000 Jews.

TIED OF IT.

I've grown so tired of striking that work looks good to me; though I've had little liking, of late, for industry. The war got me unsettled, unfit for honest toil, and, like a palfrey mottled, I reared and pawed the soil. I called on men and brothers to come and strike with me, and set their dads and mothers from tyrants' shackles free. And all the boys responded, and quit their useful tasks, grew whiskers many-fronned, and yawned from kegs and casks. Like me, they called on workers to throw their hands down, and join the ranks of shirkers who thronged the idle town. And so our graft kept spreading, and ran us all in debt, and very few were treading the paths where toilers sweat. I sat, with other bumpkins, around the Blue Front store, and no one grew two pumpkins where but one grew before. And no one plowed a furrow, or made an anvil ring, or came out from his burrow, to laugh and dance and sing. But all were talking sorrow, and pessimism black, and swearing that to-morrow would see our bulwarks crack. And now, I'm tired of striking, I need some iron men, and gladly I'd go hiking to make things hum again.

Musical Instruments in Church.

While it is certain that as early as the fifteenth century instruments besides the organ were used in church in connection with polyphonic liturgical compositions, it has not been definitely ascertained to what extent that was the case, what passages were played by the instruments alone, and where they simply reinforced the voices.

The difficulty of determining the precise nature of instrumental co-operation with the voice is increased by the fact that in those days the text was applied by the composer to only one voice—generally the cantus, or upper voice. In accordance with this model the singers themselves applied the text to the other voices as they proceeded. At all events the instrument or as a substitute for the human voice, and had no independent function in our modern sense.

Furthermore, they were employed with sole reference to their pitch and not to their timbre, or tone-quality. Thus, instruments of the violin family and flutes would play with the high voices—sopranos and altos—whereas horns and trombones were assigned to the tenor and bass parts.

It was with the advent of monody that the use of instruments in connection with the voices in church music received a great impetus. The closely-knit, compact, polyphonic structure which had predominated up to this time, needed no extraneous aid for its effectiveness and sonority. This was not the case with the new style of composition rapidly superseding the old school. It depended to a great extent for its tonal body, and artistic existence on the aid of instruments.

The great perfection reached in the construction of stringed instruments in the sixteenth century was both a manifestation of, and an aid to, the growing tendency. Virtually, not only on stringed, but also on wind instruments was a common accomplishment. The character and individuality of the instruments, so to speak, were being made available as means of expression for the subjective moods, dramatic feelings and conceptions of the composer.

The "Die-Hards" Day.

The battle of Albuera, one of the fiercest, in proportion to the number of combatants, in which the British infantry ever were engaged, and one of the most shining examples of their stubborn refusal to admit defeat, was fought on May 16, 1811, as the result of an attempt by Marshal Soult to relieve Badajoz, then besieged by Anglo-Spanish armies under Marshal Beresford and General Blake. It cannot be said, however, that the all-ed generalship was equally creditable! The Spaniards, badly handled, when deployed, and to cut it to pieces. Then came the memorable charge of Cole's Fusilier Brigade, which, acting on an order that Col. (later Viscount) Hardinge gave on his own responsibility, advanced to a height, the key of the position, which the French had seized, and after a murderous conflict drove them headlong down. It was then that the 57th Regt. earned its popular nickname from the dying adjuration of its colonel, Inglis, "Fifty-seventh! Die hard!" They obeyed. Out of 670 bayonets, they lost their colonel, 22 officers and 410 rank and file. Altogether, the allies lost some 7,000 men, of whom 4,500 were English, the rest Spanish and Portuguese. The French casualties were about 1,000 greater; and, although it has been claimed that the conflict was drawn, the significant fact remains that Soult drew off and left the field in possession of the British, who made at least a formal appearance of resuming the siege of Badajoz, although that fortress was not then to fall, a barren enough fruit of so much bloodshed.
