THE HARDEST THING TO FACE.

RUTH CAMERON

Joy in Peace of Mind.

It is hard enough to face a decision between pleasure and duty, but in that case you get something either way you decide. If you take the pleasure you, at least, have a good time or an illusion of one. If you take the duty, you have the supreme joy of peace of mind and self-respect.

But when you have to choose between divided duties you don't get full peace of mind either way. As I have said before, I think women have much more of this sort of thing than men, because with men the personal relations are so much simpler. A man's chief duty in life is as provider for his family, while a woman has more complicated personal relations. She is often wrenched and torn between her duties to her husband and children or between her duties to her husband and to a helpless father or mother.

But is that a Divided Duty? Doubtless, men have to face certain conflicts between their duties to their family and to honesty in business, but when you come right down to it this is hardly a divided duty, after all.

Again I often think how hard it must be for men in public life when they have to make decisions in matters in which duty seems to call them both ways. We who see one side very clearly because it happens to be something close to our hearts condemn him if he decides in some other way than we wish. We say he is doing it from some unworthy motive when it may be that he has only done what seemed to him the right thing.

As I look back over these remarks I see I have said one thing I should not have said. I have declared that when you choose between two duties you do not get peace of mind either way.

That is an Extravagance. That is a very wrong suggestion to give. There are some of us who are that weak, but it is a weakness that should be overcome.

When we perceive a divided duty it is our part to look it straight in the face, to make our decision as wisely as possible and then put the matter out of our thoughts and have peace of mind. We have earned it by doing the best we can. Not to take our due recompense would be absolute folly and a spiritual extravagance tending to lessen our ability to be of value to ourselves and the rest of the world.

of having burned to death a woman, because they believed her to be a witch. This crime was committed on the 15th of that month at Bally-radea, near Clonmel, in Ireland, a market and assize town on the borders of the counties Tipperary and Waterford. She was Bridget Cleary, aged 27, the wife of one of these men who were not condemned to execution. On July 5 her husband was sentenced to twenty years imprisonment, and the others to various periods of such confinement. On September 17, 1875, an old woman was killed as a witch at Long Compton, in Warwickshire, but in this case the murderer was half mad. On August 4, 1863, at Castle Heddingham, in Essex, an old deaf and dumb Frenchman, who spent a very solitary life though possessing large estates in Cumberland and Cardiff, was ducked as a wizard, because he had practised fortune-telling a little, but refused to heal his neighbors' ailments! A mob of small shopkeepers and women, of whom one of each were tried as the ringleaders, half suffocated him in a ditch, and then struck him severely. In 1602, after the restoration of Charles the Second, Sir Mathew Hale, the eminent jurist and judge, condemned for witchcraft two women, who were therefore burned to death. About 1676, at least, seventeen such persons were burned at St. Oystin's parish in Essex. In 1705 two pretended witches were executed at Northampton and five others seven years afterwards; while in 1716 a Mrs. Hicks and her daughter, aged nine, were hanged for witchcraft at Huntingdon. The laws of Moses decreed, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live" (Exodus xxii. 18 because it was connected with idolatry. But when

In 1736, in the reign of George the Second, a poor old woman was accused of this crime in Surrey, the British laws against witchcraft were repealed and abolished.

Rev. Dr. Cody Explains System in Vogue in Ontario.

"The Educational System in Ontario and Toronto."

"The proper aim is to teach the boys and girls how to live. Education is the transmission of life through the living to the living for the purpose of living, and therefore much depends upon the teachers. They must not be starved or have a grievance. The organization depends upon the buildings, equipment and dental and medical inspection, and here again the teachers are of great importance. The attendance must be regular or the benefits of the organization are lost. We must insist upon the boys and girls attending as this is the age of democracy and we must not have an ignorant democracy in the future."—Toronto Mail and Empire.

AT THE TOP.

Whenever you see someone up at the top. Don't imagine he got there by-luck. For back of his glory lies many a story of battle and struggle and pluck; He may seem to be taking things easy to-day. And digging the trials which irk. But the years of his past, from the first to the last, Were a constant succession of work.

Whenever you see someone crowned by success. Don't fancy he won it by chance; Though he's walking to-day on an easier way. And you cannot behold with a glance The scars of his battle, just keep this in mind—

Life's laurels don't go to the shirk, And if you but knew his life history through, You'd know that he once had to work.

Success doesn't come to the indolent hand. With busy men life is concerned; Be the man who he may, he will find on the way

That its prizes all have to be earned. So whenever you gaze on a leader of men,

Up on top where the glory is fair, You can know with his luck there were courage and pluck—

You can bet that he worked to get there.
