

ANNABEL
OR THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER XI.
A FAR JOURNEY RESOLVED ON—A DEEP BE-HIND THE SCENES—"THE TEMPTA-TION" APPROACHES.

Philip sprang to Annabel's side, scornfully indignant also.
"Let me meet this," he said. "The honor of your parents is not less dear to me than to you, and 'tis not fit that you should have to demean yourself by repelling such an insult. Sir," he added, turning sternly to Hayes, "you cannot be aware of the unmitigated slander involved in your words, if there were no marriage." On behalf of this young lady, I call upon you instantly to withdraw them, and to make full apology for having uttered them."

"Sorry I cannot comply with the demand, Mr. Weston, returned Hayes. "I spoke in the capacity of a lawyer, and a lawyer when in the discharge of his duty is bound to disregard personal feelings."
"But a lawyer, sir, even in the discharge of his duty, is not at liberty to inflict a gratuitous and unjustifiable insult."

"Most certainly not, Hayes," exclaimed Mr. Langton, emphatically.
"Barbard, I am very angry with you —very angry indeed," said Mrs. Langton, coming forward at this moment, and, with a kind, protecting gesture, passing her arm round Annabel. "Nothing could be more cruel or more shocking than to insinuate the possibility of my cousin not having been married to Mr. Leighton."

It was positively ungentlemanly," added her husband.
"It was cowardly," cried Philip, whose beacon burned at the insult which Annabel had received.

"And false—false—false," said Annabel, with concentrated vehemence.
"This is all very well, ladies and gentlemen," responded Hayes, very coolly, "but you see you and I look at the thing from a different point of view. I have said already that I speak and judge as a lawyer; but I have also to add that I do so as the legal adviser, and having been in the confidence, of the late Mr. Seymour, and also as being the trustee of Mrs. Langton under the marriage settlement. Various interests are therefore in my keeping, and, however much I may regret giving this young lady pain, I must be faithful to the trust committed to me."

"Does the trust require you to dishonor the memory of Annabel's mother?" asked Philip, incredulously.
"How can I tell?" replied the other.
I can only repeat what I said before, and if there were no marriage there could be no certificate, and this sufficiently explains its absence. You call that a gratuitous and wanton insult, but I call upon Mr. and Mrs. Langton, to say if the rumour never existed that the young lady's parents had not been married. Let them assert that if they can."

"You hear him!" exclaimed Annabel, turning her flashing eyes on the person who had been named. "Speak, oh, speak, and tell him that the faintest whisper of such a foul lie was never made even by the vilest lips!"

She paused, waiting for the clear assurance she had indicated, but to her unspeakable amazement she saw the merchant's face grow pale, and an expression of distress and pain came on both their faces, while they maintained utter silence.

"What!" she cried. "You speak not; you are confused. Oh heaven! it is not possible that you have heard of this horrible rumour. Mr. Langton, in heaven's name, speak, and say you have not."
"I—I never believed it—never in the least," faltered the merchant.

"And I always hoped it was false," added his wife, assaying again to comfort Annabel by a shielding caress.

But, with a sudden start, the latter drew back from him, and gazed for some moments in dumb and inexpressible agony at both.

"Oh heaven, give me strength to bear this!" she waited at length, with a pi-teous upward look.
"Annabel my darling," cried Philip, coming close to her.

But even from him she also recoiled, and put forth her hands to keep back the arms which would have encircled her.

WM. STEWART

Mr. PETRIE takes this opportunity to thank the Public for their large and liberal support during the seven years he has been in business in Guelph.

The New Store is the one formerly occupied by Mr. H. Berry, and lately by Mr.
J. R. Port, as a Confectionery Store.
The store has been enlarged and refitted, making it a much more desirable place of business than the old stand.

Having secured the new store for a term of Ten Years, I hope, with the assistance of the Public, to prevent in the future as I have done during the past seven years, any monopoly in the Drug Trade in Guelph.

The old store will remain open for business until the first of May.

By conducting my business in the future in the same upright principle as in the past, I trust to receive a continuance of your generous support.

I am, yours very truly,
