

In the Old Land.

A German Officer Dies From Sunstroke During the Maneuvers.

Pope Leo Expresses Admiration for President Cleveland.

Archbishop of Moscow Dead.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 17.—Archbishop of Moscow died there on Monday.

Pierce Fight Between Workmen.

Paris, Aug. 17.—French and Italian workmen fought in Algiers-Mortes, Department of Gard, today. Ten men were killed and 40 were wounded.

Mr. Tupper En Route for Home.

London, Aug. 17.—Charles H. Tupper, Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and British agent at the Bering Sea arbitration, sailed for Montreal on the steamer Parisian today.

Killed by Sunstroke.

Berlin, Aug. 17.—A review of military maneuvers was held today at Konigsberg. The weather was intensely warm and the soldiers suffered greatly. Count Kinkowien suffered a sunstroke and died in a few minutes.

Cholera Still Increasing.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 17.—Official returns indicate a further increase of cholera. The epidemic is especially severe in Moscow, where 168 new cases and 67 deaths from the disease were reported from Aug. 8 to Aug. 12.

Blake and the Veto Power.

London, Aug. 17.—In the House of Commons yesterday Hon. Edward Blake, speaking on the power of her Majesty's veto, said that in 100 cases out of 100 it was used by the courts of justice. A previous mistake would be made if the veto were exercised, except in cases of an extraordinary character, but there certainly might be cases where the veto should be put in force.

Dr. Gallagher.

London, Aug. 17.—United Ireland, of Dublin, today says that repeated representations made to Right Hon. Herbert H. Asquith, Secretary of the Home Office, regarding the mental condition of Dr. Thomas Gallagher, convinced him that the prisoner was insane, and orders were given for Dr. Gallagher's release from prison.

The Paper adds that Dr. Gallagher is now on a ship en route for New York.

London, Aug. 17.—Home Secretary Asquith states Dr. Gallagher has not been released, and the Government has no intention of releasing him.

The Cholera Record.

Naples, Aug. 17.—During the 24 hours ending at noon yesterday there were eleven new cases of cholera in this city and eight deaths from the disease.

United States Surgeon-General Wyman at Washington received a cablegram from Antwerp this morning.

Antwerp this morning. The cablegram advised six new cases of cholera had been reported, five of which proved fatal.

Emigrants, the dispatch says, will now be isolated in selected hotels for five days and the personal effects of those who are returning to their native districts with a view of security in case of general trouble. The working people refuse to resume their occupations until after to-morrow, which is a Mohammedan prayer day.

The Bombay Riots.

London, Aug. 17.—A Calcutta dispatch to the Times referring to the recent riots in Bombay, says the cow killing incident was made a pretext for the opening of hostilities. The enmity between the Mohammedans and Hindus has been growing wider and wider.

London, Aug. 17.—A dispatch from Bombay says although there has been no renewal of rioting in that city to-day, confidence has not yet been fully restored. The shops are closed and every train carrying the city is filled with those who are returning to their native districts with a view of security in case of general trouble. The working people refuse to resume their occupations until after to-morrow, which is a Mohammedan prayer day.

The Pope and the President.

Rome, Aug. 17.—The Pope today again received the Rev. Wm. E. Bartlett, of Baltimore, chairman of the examiners of schools. His Holiness spoke affectionately to President Cleveland, whose letter recently forwarded through Cardinal Gibbons to the head of the church greatly impressed his Holiness.

The Pope said in a friendly manner to Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Keane, rector of the Catholic University of America; Dr. O'Connell, rector of the American college in Rome; and the Very Rev. T. Bouquillon, professor of moral theology, and the Dean of the divinity faculty of the Catholic University of America. He extolled Prof. Bouquillon's wisdom and enlightened spirit. Prof. Bouquillon has given the Pope a long treatise on the situation at the university of Washington, and the condition of the church, who will leave Rome shortly, expresses himself as hopeful of the normal development of American matters. The Pope will shortly publish an important document with reference to the Washington University.

Late Canadian News

Thursday was Ottawa's civic holiday.

Harvest was begun in most places in the Northwest, but was not general for a week or so. The weather is favorable.

The average daily earnings of the Toronto street railway during the three months ending May 31, 1893, was $1,935 40.

The Winnipeg special ran into a C. P. R. excursion train at St. Rose, Que., Thursday evening, and smashed up one of the hind cars. Fortunately nobody was hurt.

Geo. Olds, general traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with the trade already done by the new Canadian steamship line to Australia.

Jennie Van Camp, the girl who disappeared from the British American Hotel, at Windsor, two weeks ago, is at the home of her parents at Buel, Sault Ste. Marie, and is very sick, according to a letter received from her parents.

is very sick, according to a letter received from her parents.

Owing to the frequent occurrence of marine disasters in the Straits of Belle Isle the council of the Quebec Board of Trade will ask the Federal Government to complete the system of Gulf telegraphy by constructing a cable between Anticosti and Belle Isle.

Herman Jackson, of Springfield, N. Y., was accidentally shot while hunting on Hollow Lake, Muskoka, on Wednesday.

He was a son of Dr. W. H. Jackson, with his wife and son Herman and Mrs. S. E. Spalding, of Springfield, were spending their holidays on the South Muskoka River.

Directors Smile!

The Financial Outlook of the Big Show Is Brightening.

Marked Increase in Earnings and Decrease in Expenses.

The Peace Congress—A Claim That Women Can Put an End to Militarism.

WORLD FAIR GROUNDS, CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—The financial outlook of the World's Fair was never brighter than it is now.

Since the recent radical reductions in running expenses there has been a marked increase in the earnings and the attendance is growing larger daily. Fifteen special World's Fair trains brought 11,600 visitors into the city last night. They were all from eastern points and came because of low rates offered by eastern lines.

While the gate receipts are increasing, the fair officials say that the average amount of money spent by each visitor is 20 per cent. less than during the first two months of the fair. They account for this in two ways. First, it is due to scarcity of money and hard times; second, there is a change in the character of the people who are now coming. At the opening of the fair the visitors were mainly from rural districts and now those from rural districts are beginning to arrive. Never before has there been such a rush for admission at the gates as to-day.

A statement of World's Fair finances shows that it has liabilities of $1,100,462, besides outstanding debenture bonds of $4,444,500. Receipts from concessions for July were $600,000. Receipts from all sources about $80,000 a day and expenses $15,000. The net revenue for the remainder of the fair is expected to be about $4,000,000, leaving a margin over debts for stock dividends.

The feature of the Peace Congress yesterday was a paper by Mrs. Ormiston Chant, of London, holding that it is within the power of the women of the world to disband all armies and put an end to militarism. Plans are being prepared for a great petition from the Christian bodies of the world to Governments asking that arbitration for the settlement of all international disputes be agreed upon.

The leading feature of to-day's session of the peace congress was a telegram concerning the outcome of the international conference in Paris which was sent to Queen Victoria and to President Cleveland. The motion passed amid much enthusiasm. The joint message read as follows:

"To her Majesty, the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and to Grover Cleveland, President of the United States—The World's Peace Congress, of Chicago sends equal congratulations to Great Britain and America on the triumph of arbitration as a substitute for war exemplified in the recent Bering Sea decision, commending the friendship of both nations, and full of happiest augury for mankind."

A favorable report was made by the committee on the organization of an international conference of arbitration at the World's Fair to-day were 130,404.

THE DROWNING RECORD.

Miss Kate Hanson Loses Her Life at Sorel.

A Toronto Boy Falls From His Bicycle Into the Bay—Fatalities in New York State.

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.—Miss Kate Hanson, second daughter of C. D. Hanson, the well-known insurance adjuster, was drowned last evening at Sorel. She was out in a canoe and the craft upsetting, before help could reach her. Miss Hanson had sunk before she was well known in social circles here.

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—William Bean, a 12-year-old boy living on Dundas street, was riding a bicycle this morning at the foot of Bay street, near the edge of the bay, when he was upset, and falling into the water, he was drowned before assistance could reach him.

POTTSVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Joseph Ketchum, jun., aged 13, son of Joseph Ketchum, of Classen avenue, Brooklyn, was drowned while bathing in a pond at Millbrook, Dutchess county.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Miss Josephine B. Knapp, aged 28 years, was drowned while bathing at Lake Huntington, Sullivan county.

MAINGLED BY A SAW.

Shocking Death of a Lad in an Owen Sound Factory.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Aug. 14.—Fred Mitchell, a 9-year-old boy, wandered unnoticed into the North American Bent Chair Company's factory this afternoon, and while the sawyer's back was turned, approached the big circular saw, when he was caught by a peculiar sound, turned and found young Mitchell's body caught in the guide of the saw, which had cut off all the back portion of his head, his left shoulder and left arm. The coroner decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Mr. Laurier's Movements.

The Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the Liberal party, will come to Ontario early in September. It is expected that his first public appearance will be at the annual meeting in North York on the 5th of the month. He will remain in Ontario for three or four weeks, and it is likely will address three meetings a week during that time. The dates on which, and the places at which, he will speak have not yet been definitely settled.

Frightful Catastrophe!

A Train Precipitated Into a Swollen Stream

By the Collapse of an Undermined Bridge.

Seven Persons Killed Outright and Others Injured—Names of the Victims.

DANVILLE, Va., Aug. 17.—An accident occurred at the county line trestle just east of Milton yesterday morning at 2:50 o'clock, by which two passenger coaches and a sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

He threw open the throttle, and the engine and tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and the sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons outright and wounding a number of others. The train left here at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engine, Peyton Tustall, who says he was running at the rate of ten miles an hour, felt the bridge giving way.

employed in 41 industries, 21 were working for less than $2 per week and 17 were receiving $20 or more per week.

Between these extremes the greater numbers are massed in three classes earning from $4 to $7 per week, as follows: Six hundred and seventy-five received from $4 to $5, 882 from $5 to $6, 860 from $6 to $7. Below this central group are found 680 who are found from $4 per week, and above it are found 1,429 who earn from $7 to over $25 per week. This, then, is the general