SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Disclaims Alleged Interviews Lately Published as Apocryphal.

London, June 5 .- The Standard says: Our London correspondent telegraphs that on landing at Liverpool from New York, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of the Dominion of Canada, had a very enthusiastic reception. The Lord Mayor. Lord Strathcona, and several commercial gentlemen awaited his arrival. The lord mayor requested Sir Wilfrid to break his journey in Liverpool, but in vain. He left for Euston by the Atlantic express.

Sir Wilfrid resisted the efforts of the interviewer, remarking that he had never yet been interviewed by a press representative. He was, however, shown a statement from a London newspaper, which he was alleged to have made respecting the Alaskan boundary dispute, and some alleged agitation in Canada for union with the United States, both of which he said were apocryphal.

Those who meet with the word peerly sociation of a baby queen and a loyal people. Those who meet with the word in their reading do not often stop to ask how it came to be applied. It appears that the first attempt at the portraiture of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots was made in her infancy, and her small face was engraved upon the Scottish halfpennies at the time of her coronation in 1543, when she was but nine months old. A number of these small coins are still preserved, and it will be easily understood how the name "bawbee," or baby, came to be given to the ooin bearing the effigy of the baby. The halfpenny of Scotland is still commonly called the bawbee, although the baby face no longer appears on it.

The great value of salt as an antiseptic and the fact that nature appears to have made it an essential ingrediant in the food of nearly all animals have made the medical profession very hospitable toward new theories or discoveries regarding its therapeutic qualities. The doctors, in fact, are never unprepared for the announcement of some extraordinary cure effected by the use of this widely distributed compound.

That pneumonia can be cured by pumping an 8 per cent sodium chloride solution at temperatures ranging from 120 to 130 degrees Fahrenheit into the lungs, however, naturally taxes the credulity of most physicians. This achievement was announced by Dr. W. Byron Coakley of this city in a paper read by him before the American association at the recent convention at Saratoga. That such a saline solution would be death to all bacteria, and would also have an antiseptic effect upon diseased tissue will be readily conceded. It is a question of getting the solution into the lungs in such a way that the patient could stand the treatment. the treatment.
