

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

SIMPLE TURBAN OF VELVET

There's no use talking, the turban is to be the hat of the season. The women to whom these hats are not becoming are few in number, which, perhaps, partially accounts for its popularity.

This turban is made of velvet, and is encircled with up-standing wings of a different shade. A graceful and perky little bow of the velvet is placed at the back on the left.

Sweet Potato Time

Cynthia Grey Tells of Dishes Old and New—All Good.

Croquets—To two cups hot rice add three tablespoons butter, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of pepper and a beaten egg. Shape in croquets, egg and crumbs, and fry in deep fat.

Roasted—Wash and pare potatoes that are of uniform size. One hour before the pork roast is done put them in the pan with the meat, and baste every ten minutes with the drippings.

Stuffed—Bake six large, well-shaped potatoes. Cut in two lengthwise. Then scoop out contents and to them add a generous quantity of butter, pepper, and salt to taste, and a little cream or milk. When beaten light and smooth, re-fill shells, heaping up roughly, brush with butter, and brown in a hot oven.

Candied—Take medium-sized potatoes and boil till nearly done. Peel, and cut the long way into one-half inch slices. Fill a baking dish with layers of slices thickly covered with brown sugar and bits of butter. Pour over one-half cupful boiling water, and cook in hot oven from 20 to 30 minutes.

Fried—Boil sweet potatoes till they can be pierced with a fork, but not till tender. Remove skins, dust with sugar, roll in melted butter, and fry in deep fat.

Souffle—Soak two cups sweet potatoes cut in thin slices in salted water an hour. Drain and fry in hot deep fat. Delicious.

Glazed—Boil sweet potatoes ten minutes, drain, peel and cut in slices. Put in buttered pan, cover with a mixture of one-half cup sugar, four tablespoons water and two tablespoons butter. Bake one-half hour.

Au Gratin—Cut cold-boiled sweet potatoes in one-third inch slices. Put layer in buttered bake dish, sprinkle with salt, pepper and brown sugar. Dot with bits of butter. Repeat until dish is full, cover with dry crumbs and bits of butter, and bake until the crumbs are brown.

each plateful to the maid, who places them before the guests in turn. Plates should always be passed in at the left hand side of the guest and removed from the same side. The fish, meat and vegetable courses are served by the host, the maid receiving each plate from him and placing it as before. Salads are often served with the course, and are placed before the hostess and dispensed in the same manner, or guests may help themselves, as the maid places the dish before them. Soiled dishes are removed after each course, and just before bringing in the dessert, the maid brushes the crumbs off the cloth. The dessert is served by the hostess. Usually the coffee is brought in with the dessert, though it may be served along with fruit or bonbons. Unless it is a formal meal there is no room in a guest or members of the family assisting at the table.

Dear Miss Grey: Kindly tell me what kind of a club some girls of 12 could get up. Suggest some names and a badge.

SUNSHINE.

A.—The Fresh phrase, "Sans Souci," which means "without care," would be a good name for your club. Other names would be "The Gray Coterie," "The Twelve Trumps," or "The 'W' Some Workers." As you are doubtless all schoolgirls, have your meetings on Friday nights. Elect a president and secretary, who, with four others, could form an executive committee. Exert your ingenuity as to a mysterious and half-raising form of initiation; start a circulating library among your members. A weekly or monthly newspaper recording the doings of the club and its members also adds to the enjoyment. Why not also include something helpful to others in your club aim, such as sending flowers or magazines to sick ones in your locality? A bow of ribbon of two colors would make a very suitable badge.

Dear Miss Grey: I should like the linen which a bride-elect provides for herself to be laundered before the wedding? Should table linen be washed before using?

WISHTH KNEW.

A.—It's a matter of choice. Personally I would prefer it laundered. Not necessarily, unless soiled.

Dear Miss Grey: 1. Could you give me a simple recipe for a good, home-made cold cream for facial use? My skin is very dry and at certain seasons breaks out in rough, dry patches. Do you know of any other remedy? 2. What is a cure for sore lips?

ANXIOUS.

A.—1. Pure white wax, 1 ounce; spermaceti, 2 ounces; almond oil, 1/2 pint. Mix these together in a glazed earthenware dish over a gentle heat, stirring while melting with a silver spoon. When melted, add three ounces glycerine and ten drops attar of roses.

When buying a new broom pull out a couple of dozen of the fine, smooth straws, and put them in a clean bowl and place in cupboard to use when testing cake, etc. They will always be ready and clean.

Then strain through muslin and as it cools stir it to a snowy whiteness. The secret of making fine cold cream is to stir and beat it well all the time it is cooling. 2. Melt together one ounce of white wax, one ounce sweet oil, one drachm spermaceti. While simmering, add a little oil of roses or lavender to perfume it. Then pour into small jars or boxes to cool. Apply when needed.

Dear Miss Grey: Is it proper for a girl to go to a party with a boy of 17 whom she has met but once, if his sister is in attendance? 2. If someone has been trying to make trouble between a boy (who has been very gentlemanly and kind to me) and myself, should I explain matters to him or not? 3. Has not spoken for two years. Is a girl of 16 past too young to keep company with a boy of her own age? 4. Who should speak first when meeting, the boy or girl? 5. Should one offer their hand when being introduced to a boy? PUZZLED.

A.—1. I see no harm in it. 2. Yes, tell him how matters stand. 3. I think so. It is right to enjoy the company of your boy friends and have as pleasant a time as you can, but you are too young to think at all seriously about these things. Play along as long as possible. 4. The latter. 5. No, merely bow.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE

In blending flour and water for thickening, if a fork is used, it will not lump. Also, in cutting hot cake or any of the steamed puddings, a fork will separate, but not make heavy.

Dissolve a tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda in your bath. It will neutralize the odor of perspiration and is cleansing and cooling.

A good way to make toast quickly, as well as to utilize small scraps of bread, is to lay the pieces in a corn popper and toast over the coals.

To prevent milk from burning when boiled in a saucepan, cover the bottom of the pan with hot water and let it boil rapidly, leaving just enough to barely cover the bottom. Add the milk, and no matter how hot the fire under it, it will not scorch nor burn.

The flavor of cocoa is improved if the least bit of vanilla is placed in it. Sometimes a teaspoonful of whipped cream is served in each cup of cocoa.

Carpets may be cleaned without removing from the floor by sprinkling cornmeal, which has first been saturated with gasoline, over them. Care must be taken in lighting matches at this time, and windows should be open to air the rooms.

When fly-paper comes in contact with the floor, furniture or clothing, apply kerosene to the article which has been injured. The kerosene will quickly remove the sticky substance. It does not injure clothing and readily evaporates.

DAINTY EVENING GOWN

Tiny kimono sleeves and a high-waisted bodice characterize this French little evening gown. The popular ribbon embroidery is used to decorate the panel of the skirt, and frills of narrow lace are used here and there with telling effect. The material may be any of the countless sheer gossamer-like fabrics found on the counters today, and of the color most becoming to the wearer.

When a Man Marries

By Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Copyright, 1909, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Jim, I'll be—something or other, he said finally, and then he turned on my eyes dry (yes, I was crying; I always do when I am angry). I heard Jim coming downstairs, and I watched the water out of sight. Would anyone have foreseen the trouble that watch would make?"

Jim was sulky. He dropped into a chair and stretched out his legs, looking gloomily at nothing. Then he got up and shut the door, closing the door behind him, without having spoken a word. It was more than human nature could stand.

When I went into the den, he was stretched out on the davenport, with his face buried in the cushions. He looked absolutely wilted, and every line of him was drooping.

"Go on out, Kit," he said in a smothered voice. "Good girl and don't bother me around."

You are shameless! I gasped. "Pol-low you when you are lying around my neck like a—like a—Millsboro was so. I wanted to say, but I couldn't think of it."

He turned over and looked up from his cushions like an ill-treated and suffering animal. "What did she find? The necklace?" I asked eagerly. He was too wretched to notice this.

"No. That picture of you I did last winter. She is crazy—she says she's got upstairs and sitting in the room and take smallpox and die."

"Fiddlesticks!" I said rudely, and something hammering on the door and opened it.

Pardon me for disturbing you," Bella said, her eyes gleaming. "But—Plannigan says the dinner has not come."

It was eight o'clock by that time, and I took an hour's rest after telephoning the order, everybody looked blank when they heard. The entire family except Mr. Harbison, who had not appeared again, escorted Jim to the telephone and hung around hungrily, suggesting new dishes every minute. And then—couldn't raise Central! It was fifteen minutes before we gave up, and Jim staring at one another despairingly.

Call out of a window, and get one of those infernal reporters to do something useful for once. Max suggested. But was indignantly hushed. We would have starved first, Jim was peering into the transmitter and kindly than his wife against his hand, like a watch that had stopped. But nothing happened. Plannigan reported a box of breakfast food, two lemons, and a pineapple cheese, a combination that didn't seem to lend itself to anything.

We went back to the dining-room from sheer force of habit and sat around the table and looked at the clock. The clock had made. Anne would talk about the salad her last cook had concocted, and Mrs. Harbison about the new necktie which the restaurant keeper smokes a corn-cob pipe while he cooks the most delicious chicken in America.

And Aunt Selma related that in her family they had a recipe for chicken smothered in cream. And then we slipped the weak lemons and nibbled at the cheese. "To change this gridiron martyrdom," Darius said, "switch the stove off. Harbison? Still looking for his watch?"

"Watch?" Everybody said it in a different tone.

"Sure," he responded. "Says his watch was taken last night from the table. But he got down to take a squirt at the telephone. Likely he fixed it."

Plannigan was beside me with the Harbison's watch slip of paper. He slid it across my lap, and clatter the watch. Plannigan stopped, but he didn't have time to say a word. He had it picked up, to have had to explain how it came to be under the table. To his piece of paper in his hand, it was impossible. I put my foot over it.

"Dreadful something," Darius asked, peering at the watch. Plannigan was still half-kneeling.

"A 'fiddle' I said, as easily as I could, and the conversation went on. But Plannigan knew, and I knew he knew. He was waiting for a chance to say a word after that, standing just behind my chair. I dropped my useless napkin, to have it caught by the foot of the watch. I said to Betty that my shoe buckle was loose, and actually got the watch in my hand. Then they all got up and went sadly back to the library, and Plannigan and I faced each other.

Plannigan was not a handsome man at any time, though up to then he had at least the appearance of one. But now, with my hand on the back of my chair, his face suddenly grew menacing. The silence was absolute and little else. He wretched alive, and opposite me the law towered and gloomed, and held the yellow remnant of a watch chain. And in the silence that wretched watch lay and ticked and ticked. Then Plannigan crossed the hall, and he opened the door into the hall, picked up the watch, and looked at it.

"You're unkind, I'm thinking," he said finally. "You've got the nerve all right, but you ain't cute enough."

"Don't know what you mean," I quavered. "Give me that watch to return to Mr. Harbison."

"I give it back myself, like I did the bracelet, and—like I'm going to give the necklace back, if you'll act like a sensible little girl."

I could only choke.

or, he could buy them for you, and be damned to him, or some ladylike equivalent."

"Jim is a jellyfish," I said, contemptuously. "What did he say?"

"He said he only cared for one woman, and that was Bella; that he never had really cared for you, and that he would divorce courts were not unkind, and that if they showed people the way to real happiness, which they couldn't amount to anything if Harbison had not been in the tent, trying to sleep."

Did not know all the particulars, but it seems that relations between Jim and Mr. Harbison were rather strained. Bella had left the roof, and Jim and the Harbison man came face to face in the door of the tent. According to Dal, little had been said, but Jim, bound by his promise to me, could not explain, and he could only stammer something about being an old friend of Mrs. Knowles. And Tom had replied shortly that it was none of his business, but that there were some things which he would not justify.

He tried to pass Jim. Jim was instantly enraged; he blocked the door to the roof and insisted to know what the other man meant. There were two or three versions of the answer he got. The general purport was that Mrs. Harbison had no desire to explain further, and that the situation was forced on him. But if he ignored and neglected his wife for someone else, there were communities where he would be a hero.

"Meaning me?" Jim demanded, apoplectic.

The remark was a general one. Mr. Harbison retorted, "but if you wish to make a concrete application—"

But Jim went up and then found them glaring at each other, Jim with his hands clenched at his sides, and Mr. Harbison with his arms crossed and very erect. Dal took Jim by the elbow and led him downstairs, muttering, and the situation was forced on him. But Dal was not optimistic.

"You can do a bit yourself, Kit," he finished. "Look more closely at the Harbison. You can do that without trying. Take Max on for a day or so; it would be a change, wouldn't it? Don't let Tom Harbison take it into his head that you are grieving over Jim's neglect, or he's likely to toss him off the roof."

Jelly Tumblers for Picnics.

Jelly tumblers with tight-fitting covers are most useful articles for the picnic basket. They serve as butter crocks, sugar bowls, gelatine pudding molds, and receptacles for meat or vegetable salads and deviled eggs. Plenty of oiled paper is essential, and one must always remember to separate articles with strong odors and tastes—such as apples, bananas, coffee or spiced things.

Dry Shampooing.

Some women whose hair is thick and who are sensitive to cold dread having their hair shampooed frequently. To keep the scalp clean under such conditions great care is necessary. Brush the scalp carefully, dividing the hair into strands. This loosens all dandruff, which should be shaken from the hair by loosening it, and holding it at arms length. Rubbing the scalp with a sponge dipped in witch-hazel is a good substitute for a regular shampoo. There are also certain proprietary preparations for scalp cleansing and dandruff removing which do not necessitate wetting the long hair.

WHO THREW THE BOMB?

Montreal, Sept. 21.—Wilfrid Dufresne, an ex-street railway conductor, is under arrest on the charge of having thrown an inflammable bomb through the window of the home of Mrs. Ruot, St. Dennis street, early last Saturday. Dufresne is said to have been a former boarder, and revenge is the motive, it is alleged. Mrs. Ruot was nursing a sick child when the canister containing gasoline was hurled through the window. The place was badly damaged by the fire which followed.

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Known to the world as a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, it is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.
