it it he expects to breed more than one horse in a beason. As self-interest is the ing principle of mankind, we would suppose a man engaged in any business would bend mercies to make it a success; but it seems to be so in breeding the race-horse. If half attention was given to raising the horse that wen to stocks on Wall Street, and half the gment used that is shown by stock brokers. ould make a grand success in a breeding blishment. Unfortunately for these estab ments, neglect is the rule, and proper care exception. Aeglec.ed mares cannot thrive the foals must suffer in some degree, in , strength, or health; at least, they cannot and nucrease as they would if the mother properly cared for. This applies to private rell as to public establishments, and is more chensible in the man who keeps a private blishment, for he has finer mares, and should ble to provide good shelter and good food them.

he greatest wrong I observe, in most all ions of the country, is with the men who in horses to board, and neglect them. advision that they are amply prepared stalls and sheds, with a supply of good or, or as the season may be, with plenty of tern at or, or, or as the season may be, with pienty of terms and running water through all the sich, at is, yet, when you send for your stock, you not on find them stunted and half starved. ### HYBERNATION OF BIRDS.

A correspondent sends the following to the Rod and Gun, which he correctly characterizes as fishy:-"While studying for the ministry in the city of Toronto I used to go out into the country on Saturday afternoons, spending the Sabbath preaching in destitute places. At one of these out-stations lived an aged German, a most excellent, simple-minded, honest Christian man, at whose house I generally spent a night. On one occasion Buffalo, N.Y. with the following gentlemen we got into a conversation in reference to the whereabouts of our birds in winter. 'Well," said he, " I think I can tell you. During the war of 1812 I went out on New Year's Day deer hunting. I wounded a deer and followed his track a long distance. At length he came to a springy place over which he leaped,. I though I could leap as far as a wounded deer, but I came short and sank in the mud, and in extricating myself I found I had lost one of my I rolled up my sleeve and began to search for my shoe. Instead of finding it I felt something soft that frightened me. feared it might be a muskrat and I should be bitten; but I could not afford to-lose my shoe, so I concluded I must venture another effort. I did so, and found the same thing again. This time I felt round it, and finding it to be too small for a rat, I pulled it out, and to my utter surprise I found it to be a swallow. Before finding my shoe," he said, "I pulled out seven. Curiosity led me to put them in my pocket. I carried them home and put them down before the fire. After a while I observed a twitching of the wings. Shortly they got up, cleaned the mud of their fathers, and began to fly about the hous." Had I had no corrobor ative evidence of the old man's statement I could not have doubted his word, he was too good a mun to tell a willful lie; besides, I had the testimony of his wife, who saw the birds brought and saw what followed. A number of years aft r the above conversation with the German, I delivered a lecture at a mechanic's institute, on some of the wonders I pature. # BILLIARDS.

The finest billiard match ever played for a meney stake took place recently at the Uniety restaurant, London, between F. Shorter and Tom Taylor, for a stake of £200. On reaching 444 to Taylor's 127, Shorter got on the spot, and ran out a winner by means of a magnificent break of 556, including 181 spot hazards. Shorter thus won the game by no less than 843 points. However, being requested to finish his break, he continued on till he had scored 636.

He says that, at a hog has three black hoots and one wante. the white one will fall off, and leaves to conclude that the black hoofs will stay on. These hog stories have now advanced far enough to make it worth while for some one to make very sure of the facts before and r taking to explain them. But query, are all these writers so very sure of their facts ?
