

MISSIONARY DANGERS AMONG THE CHIPPEWA INDIANS.

It was on the afternoon of a day in February, 1848, that a Missionary and his Indian interpreter pursued their lonely path through the forest, in order to visit a new settlement of Ottawas and Chippewa Indians. The place was called Meshimnekoning, which means, "the place where the apples grow." Arrived at the "planting grounds," the Missionary learned that the entire band were about two miles and a half distant
