From the Countess of Aberdeen:

"I think your very pretty got-up little book, having for its object the remembrance of the birthdays of those whom we have lost to a better world, is very charmingly designed for its purpose, and I hope will meet with all the success you could desire."

From the Brant Churchman:

"The idea which is quite a new one, and this little book that embodies it, are most warmly commended by many who are best qualified to criticize, who think they will commend themselves to all who believe in the "Communion of Saints" and treasure the memory of some who have gone before."
