her any reason or affording her any opportunity to defend herself? And what society has a right to send such a woman out on such terms as this? I for one could not, dare not share the responsibility of any such action, and when the matter has been duly considered, I cannot believe that the Christian women of our church will be disposed to do so.

I believe in the two societies not only working "in harmony," but in cordial co-operation; it has been my constant endeavor to promote this during the fifteen years I have had the honor and responsibility of being president of the society. Nothing has been done without consultation with "the authorities of the Missionary Society," either in the selection of the fields which we were to employ. I always knew that the work of the two societies was identical, and that neither could suffer without the other suffering with it. Long before the Woman's Missionary Society was in existence, I was a supporter of the Missionary Society and in that society when I joined the Woman's Society, but the ladies who have gone out under the auspices of our society have a special claim upon us. I cannot see them pushed to the wall without standing by them, and if the time has come when I cannot shield them from wrong and outrage, as seems to be the case, I have no choice but to go down with them.

And now, beloved sisters, I believe it is due to you as well as to myself that I should state plainly the reasons that have led me to the conclusion that there is no other course open to me consistent with my conscientious convictions of what is right in the circumstances but to terminate my official connection with the society which has lain nearer to my heart than anything with which I have been connected with it.

Thanking you most heartily for all the kindness which I have received from you, and deeply regreting the necessity which is laid upon me, I respectfully tender my resignation as President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in Cannda.

Affectionately yours in Chr

Much Feeling Has Arisen.

Naturally there has been a great deal of feeling about this matter; the church, of whatever creed, cannot afford to alienate her women, who do so much of her work. Of Mrs. Large there seems to be but one opinion, that she has done a noble work, that she is eminently suited to the position she held and that for capability and executive ability.

Further they would not go, but there is a feeling among them that the proper attitude of the church under the circumstances would be to acknowledge its mistake frankly, to reinstate Mrs. Large,

He referred to his departure in a feeling way, and in speaking of his connection with the church he took occasion to thank Rev. Canon Hincks for what he learned while serving as his assistant. His relations with the congregation, he said, had always been most pleasant, and he promised not to forget the ones that had become dear to him. To-hight the retiring curate will be tendered a reception by the members of the church, and to-morrow he leaves for his new charge at Toronto.
