STRANGE FEATURE IN THE RESTELLI CASE

Man Searching Murderer Has Throat Cut in North Sydney, C. B.

Quincy, Mass., Aug. 16.—Griffin found dead this morning, throat cut," was the text of a message received today by Chief of Police Bureau of Quincy, and bearing the signature of Chief of Police McEachern, of North Sydney (C. B.). Griffin, who is believed to belong to Lynn, conducted on his own account a search for Restelli, the Italian stone worker, who killed two persons and wounded three others in this city nearly three weeks ago.

Chief Burrell does not know whether the message is intended to convey the idea of suicide or murder, and is awaiting further advice from Cape Breton. Sydney, N. S., Aug. 16.—(Special).—About 7 o'clock this morning, Griffin, the Quincy, Mass. detective who was here on the Restelli case, was found dead in an alleyway with his throat cut from ear to ear. A razor was found in a pool of blood under his head.

An impression about this morning to the effect that Griffin has been murdered by friends of Restelli is not believed, the police believe that the matter is purely a case of suicide.

R. J. WALSH HOME AFTER C.M.B.A. CONVENTION

Richard J. Walsh, C. M. B. A. delegate to the Ottawa convention, returned home today. Mr. Walsh said the convention was a great success, and was characterized by a big attendance, never equalled in the history of the order.

On the opening day the delegates met at 8 a. m., and, forming a procession numbering 1,000, paraded to the Basilica, where political high mass was sung by His Grace Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston. After the mass the procession re-formed and proceeded to Russell theatre, where an address of welcome was read by the mayor.

For the rest of the day the visiting delegates lent themselves exclusively to sight-seeing and pleasure. In the evening the Ottawa city council furnished an electric car ride. Much business was dealt with in the last two days of the convention, including hereafter all persons dealing in any shape, form or manner with liquor who had not been previously licensed.

Another feature of the convention was that business was carried on both in English and French.

Mr. Walsh is highly pleased with his trip. The next convention will take place in 1913 in Hamilton.

Thomas Morley of Carleton, and Patrick Lynch, Fairville, were also at the convention, but did not return today.

SAY PHILLIPS STOLE DIAMOND RING WORTH $35

According to statements made this morning in the police court, Harry Phillips, the young Englishman lodged in jail on a charge of theft, was rather particular when it came to securing jewelry, and to the class of the article he was taking.

The young woman clerk in the store of W. H. Irving, King street, said this morning that on August 5, the defendant went into the store while the proprietor was out, and asked to see some diamond rings, the best she had. He was shown a tray full, but decided not to invest until he saw Mr. Irving himself. Saying that he would call when the owner was in, he walked out. But a few moments after he had gone, a diamond ring, valued at $35 was missed.

Alex. Shane, employed in a second-hand store in Mill street, told the court that Phillips went to his store, and told him that his sweetheart had rejected him, and he therefore wished to dispose of the ring, which he had for sale, giving the name of Harry Blizard, Water street. He identified the ring produced by Detective Killen, as the one Phillips brought to the store, and W. H. Irving, recognized it as his property.

Sharp of King street, recognized some watches produced by the detective as having been his property. Their value would be about $33. Phillips was again remanded to jail.

PAVEMENT COMES UP; CARLETON IS JUSTIFIED

rolled before the stone was put on and had directed that some dumped on the street be removed till his instructions had been carried out. He had also called attention to the size of stone being used, but when the city engineer advised him in writing that he had approved of the Hassam method, he was little as to make any attempt to have the specifications carried out. It was after he had received this letter that he spoke of the rolling of the stone; he could do nothing more than speak of it as the letter had rendered proper.

At one time, he said, Mr. Low had said to him that he was incapable of judging the way in which the work was being done, as the Hassam was a patent method. Anything he did not understand would be all right, as the guarantee fully covered all.

As he watched the removal of the granite blocks Mr. Carleton remarked at the way in which they were dislodged and said that the cement should hold them so firm that the stone would break before the cement would break. When the stones were all removed and the work of removing the foundation was commenced, the former inspector became more interested. The picks at first found some resistance, but they were struck into the surface of the foundation and some prematurely remarked: "It looks hard enough," Mr. Carleton only replied, "Wait."

There was not long to wait, for as the picks found their way into the body of the foundation it gave quite easily.

"Now do you get that concrete?" said the ex-inspector to a Times-Star reporter, who stood beside him. "It looks as if it were do you get that concrete?"

Assistant City Engineer Hatfield, however, did not share the view. He said that for the length of time it was set about a month—and the dampness at that time, he did not look for anything in the better. This view was echoed at by Mr. Carleton.

LOCAL NEWS

At last sufficient had been removed to get on a large piece and it was lifted out and let fall by workmen it broke apart of its own weight. Another smaller piece was removed and the work was continued.

Mr. Carleton, remarking on this said that he had not made such a point in this respect as he had on the manner in which the foundation was laid.

Mr. Hatfield said that with the damp condition of the soil and being hermetically sealed by the granite blocks it would remain damp for a longer period.

Mr. Low admitted that the broken stone had been rolled before being grouted, but asserted that it was on Mr. Carleton's orders that this was done, and that when the inspector resigned and was "off the job" they adopted their own method of grouting.

Mr. Carleton said that when the first action was laid they had their own way and started with an entirely new crew, but things straightened out soon.

In conversation with the foundation was laid, Mr. Hatfield said that the mixed cement in the wall along Main street would be found as soft as the foundation being removed and the inspector on one said: "I will bet you $20 that you can get a pick into it."

Mr. Murdoch's assistant replied that he was not a betting man, and there the incident closed.

Others who looked at the operations were Alderman McEachern, Alderman Lyle, Willet, Elkin, Smith, and Holder. The latter did not hesitate to say that the material being removed did not in the least resemble concrete. "Where is Carleton?" he asked one and another, and many went forward and shook him by the hand. As he left for lunch he said that he was well satisfied.

AVERAGE NOT MORE THAN INCH AND HALF

The investigation, which was completed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Carleton says, has gone to prove his assertion that in the area in which the opening was made the thickness of concrete did not average more than 1 1/2 inches.

Contractor James Myles was present in the interview of the former inspector but was instructed by the latter to make no statement till called upon to do so.
