

WHERE WILL PRINCE OF WALES LIVE?

Question of Establishment of Heir to Throne is Being Considered.

London, July 26—Since the return of the Prince of Wales from the East the question of his future residence, both in London and the country, has been under serious consideration. No decision has yet been reached, and it is probable that His Royal Highness will retain his present rather modest establishment in York House, St. James' Palace, at least for the present.

Queen Alexandra has intimated that she is willing to relinquish the possession of Marlborough House in favor of the Prince of Wales, any time, but he has decided this offer, adding characteristically, that he "would probably get lost in the place," it being "rather too big" for him. Therefore, until such time as he marries, it seems safe to say that the prince will not become the occupant of Marlborough House.

The question of a country residence for the Prince of Wales has been debated since the war at considerable length. Years ago the hope was expressed that the prince would have a home in his principality, and both the king and the prince at one time considered this.

It is probable the prince will soon take over White Lodge, in Richmond Park, where he was born 28 years ago. The present occupant is the veteran Viscount Farrar, to whom the place was lent by the king some years ago.

Another residence which the king would like to see occupied once more is Frogmore. It has been without a tenant the greater part of the present reign. Soon after King Edward came to the throne, Frogmore was thoroughly rearranged and brought into line with modern requirements, and the present king and queen stayed with their young family on several occasions.

It was at one time suggested that Frogmore should become the home of the Earl and Countess of Athlone, but they much preferred their summer and more compact home in the Henry III. Tower of the old castle.

The prince, however, has pointed out that, for the next year and at all events, he would be only able to pass a few weeks at Frogmore annually. His tastes are extremely simple, and he admits that he has no desire to be troubled with the expense of a large residence that would necessarily be closed for the greater part of the year.

Next winter, the prince, no doubt, will leave temporarily a hunting-box in some country where he can enjoy several days sport whenever he can spare, and several residences of this description have recently been brought under his notice in the hope that they will prove suitable. It is probable that when the prince acquires a house of this nature he will have his brothers, the Duke of York and Prince Henry, as his constant guests. All of them are devotees of the chase.

BRANCH BANK MANAGER AT MACAROW TRIAL

Says Thornton Davidson & Co. Account was Frequently Discussed.

Montreal, July 26—Testifying at the trial of D. C. Macarow in the Merchants Bank case, J. D. G. Kippen, manager of the Montreal branch, swore he frequently discussed the account of Thornton Davidson and Co. broker-ages house became bankrupt and avoided the bank in great losses. The discussions had concerned the possibility of working the account down to a proper level. He said that he had been manager at the time of the firm's crash in 1920.

Macarow, he said, was in Europe then. When he returned, they had taken up the matter. The extent of the debt to the bank had been about four million dollars. No one had been held during his administration. The matter had been taken up with the solicitors.

ARBOR DAY IN AUSTRALIA.
Special attention is paid to Arbor Day in the various states of Australia. The official journals of the states give a great deal of information and suggestion to the schools about trees and Arbor Day programmes. Included in these programmes are many poems about trees. Two are quoted: From the School Paper, grades V. and VI., of Victoria, the following is taken, a poem very characteristic of Australia through its reference to the particular tree.

The Stringybark-Tree.
There's a white box and pine on the ridges afar.
Where the ironbark, white gum, and peppermint are;
There is many another, but dearest to me
And the king of them all, was the stringybark-Tree.

Then of stringybark slabs were the walls of the hut,
And from stringybark saplings the rafters were cut;
And the shelter of home sheltered my brothers and me
Was of broad sheets of bark from the stringybark tree.

KING'S VIEWS ON WAR.

Tells American at Garden Party Poison Gas Must End.

W. L. Saunders, who was invited to a garden party with King and Queen gave at Buckingham Palace had an interesting conversation with His Majesty. Mr. Saunders was a member of the Naval Consulting Board, which operated during the war. Thomas A. Edison was also a member. Mr. Saunders is also a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. In the course of the afternoon, Mr. Saunders met the Lord Chamberlain, the Duke of Atholl, who said the King would like to meet him, and as His Majesty moved about among his guests the Duke took opportunity of presenting Mr. Saunders, mentioning his connection with the Naval Consulting Board.

The King greeted cordially about Mr. Edison, his health and to what he was devoting his remarkable powers at present. Means of preventing rather than of making war were what were most wanted nowadays, said His Majesty, and he was confident the King would do all in his power in that direction, particularly by exerting his great moral influence in the world. On one point especially King and Mr. Saunders were in agreement, and that was the question of the use of poison gas in any future war. The whole world, beginning with Great Britain and America, must set its face against it. Any nation that should carry on experiments with a view to the utilization of poison gas in wartime must be put outside the pale. All other nations should band themselves against it. Just as when there was in a pack one dog that was bad, all the other dogs joined in attacking it and keeping it in order.

Mr. Saunders was much impressed by the democratic simplicity with which the King and Queen moved about among their guests, stopping to chat informally with their friends.

COLLAR AND CROSS FOR BRAVE DOG.
"Hero" of North End, Saved Lives of 92 in Wreck, and Recognition Comes.

"Hero," a Newfoundland dog owned by William Oram of the north end, is today the possessor of a magnificent collar and cross, presented to him by the Mayor of Philadelphia for saving the lives of ninety-two people on the Ethie on December 10, 1919.

During a storm this vessel was wrecked at Martin's Point, Newfoundland, and the large waves were crashing on the shore so that it was impossible to launch a boat to carry the dog to the ship. The dog dispatched into the turbulent waves with a light line attached to his collar and told to swim to the ship. After a heart-breaking struggle the brave animal got away and, although tossed and buffeted about by the raging seas reached the vessel. Those on board were amazed to see the dog, and a stouter one was carried to the vessel and the entire number of people on board numbering ninety-two souls, were saved.

SHARP ORDERS TO THE GERMANS

Caught Establishing Fire Control and Range Finding School on Kiel Canal.

Paris, July 26—The council of ambassadors decided today to send a sharp note to the German government demanding immediate destruction of a fire control and range finding school, which the German naval authorities have quietly established at a strategic point on the Kiel Canal. Allied experts opinion has declared the school convertible into fort commanding the entrance to the canal.

CANADIANS GO TO GO ON STRIKE

Railway Shopmen Complete Ballot Count and Send Word to Premier King.

Montreal, July 26—The final figures in the balloting of the railway shopmen in the province, with the proposed strike against recent wage cuts were announced this morning. Ninety seven per cent of the shopmen all over Canada voted in favor of a strike should the railways put into force the cuts announced early last week. A telegram sent to Premier King, announcing the result of the balloting, and asking if the railways had agreed to withdraw the reductions.

CONDITIONS IN CANADA.
(Rev. Dr. Cody in London-Times.)
The condition of Canada is fundamentally sound. There is an appreciation of the improvement of business conditions, but no one looks for any marked improvement until after the harvest, the prospects of which are at the present time somewhat gloomy. The rest is in spite of so hard hit last year through crop failure in some places, through rains at the time of threshing in other places, and the high cost of labor, through the exportation of American coal to the dominion, so prominent coal merchants declared today, when questioned as to what would happen if this exportation should cease.

IN WALL STREET.
New York, July 26—(10.30)—The continued rise in steel, motors and oils featured the firm opening of today's stock exchange. Railroads and industrials were also in demand. Gains of 1 to 2 points were scored by Crucible Steel, United States Alcohol, Studebaker, and Mexican Petroleum, while other gains ran from a half to one point.

OPTIMISTIC ABOUT COALS IN EASTERN CANADA.
Montreal, July 26—So long as the coal mines of Nova Scotia are producing coal, there will be no serious shortage in Eastern Canada, despite the regulations imposed yesterday by the U. S. government with regard to the exportation of American coal to the dominion, so prominent coal merchants declared today, when questioned as to what would happen if this exportation should cease.

BRITISH DEBT TO U. S.

TROPHIES FROM MAYOR.
The latest Mayor McEllen has in sport is evinced from the fact that he has donated no fewer than seven trophies to winners in various lines of athletics. This morning he received two magnificent trophies which he had ordered. One he is presenting to the North Outing Association to be given as they see fit in their big aquatic classic, and the other will be given to the senior amateur baseball league providing they complete their schedule of games. The former is of a Roman type, more than thirty inches from the base and is beautifully designed. The second is in Grecian style and is a large and magnificent trophy. The trophy for the water sports must be won three years by any club competing before they become permanent owners.

The aviator reserve has two air ports, one at Eighty-sixth street and North River and the other at Port Hamilton, Brooklyn.
"Orders from this department," the deputy commissioner's statement reads, "have gone out to Captain Theodore Bridgeman to proceed to Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., to patrol the New Jersey coasting assistance."
For the last month, according to a statement issued at police headquarters, complaints have been coming in that aviators are flying low over park parks and fairs places.
Deputy Commissioner Rodman Wamsnaker, who is in charge of the aviation division of the police department, is in Europe, but his assistant, Inspector John P. Dwyer, has ordered the reserve to be ready for duty. Captains of all precincts have been ordered to instruct patrolmen to keep a weather eye skyward. If they see a plane which in their judgment is flying too low, they are to order a patrolman of the aviation reserve to take the air and pursue the violator. The orders say "using force if necessary."
