Caught a Tartar.
An elderly man, evidently from the country, was standing near the Mansion House, when he was accosted by half-a-dozen genteelly-dressed clerks on their way to luncheon, with:

"Just arrived in town?"

"Yes, and a great place it is," replied
the countryman.

"Tis so," said another. "How is your mother?" he continued, bent on making sport with the countryman.

"Oh, she's pretty well," he replied.
"She's sent me up on business."

"Ah! What kind of business?" asked a third.

"Why," said the man, "she wanted me to round up half-a-dozen absentees from the Army, and I think I've got 'em."

The next moment the countryman had the little lot under escort and marched them off for examination.

"This is my only child, little Margarine."

"Gracious! What a name!"

"Well, you see, I haven't any but her."

Grocer—"Did that watermelon I sold
you do your whole family?"
Customer—"Very nearly. The doctor is calling yet."
