the days that were. But in Summer the Kings Islander abandons his ancestral home and fixes up a home that is a thousand times more puzzling to the traveler than is the simple abode of a real cave man. Great poles are fixed in the rocks, and on these is built a box-like affair, which is then covered with walrus skin. These walrus skin cabins look for all the world like coffins suspended on poles, but when the Summer tourist aproaches them he finds that every one is full of very live Eskimos, with sundry pups and venerable dogs scrambling out to give voice to a strange greeting.

Kings Island is the flat top of some sunken mountain. Its sides rise quite sunken mountain. Its sides rise quite perpendicularly from the water to a height of over a thousand feet. All around its four miles of shore line around its four miles of shore line there is not a square yard of beach, and only a few feet away the water is fifty fathoms deep. Owing to the fact that the region about Bering Strait is almost always stormy, it is nearly always quite impossible for white men to land on this island. The native, by long practice, has learned how to land his big skin "oomiak" and to launch it even when the bravest white man would fear to approach the rock shore. In launching their big canoes several men get in and then canoe and all are thrown upon the surf as a wave is ebbling.

big canoes several men get in and then canoe and all are thrown upon the surf as a wave is ebbing.

Although Kings Island is a barren rock, with practically no vegetation, the hundred or so natives who live there do not starve. In fact it is just possible that the average white family is not much better off in the way of eating, when taste is left out of the question, than are these belated cliff dwellers on Kings Island. The sea around them abounds in walruses, and when the ice pack begins moving through Bering Strait greaf herds of walruses may be heard through the long sunlit night bellowing like wild cattle. To an Eskimo a walrus is just plain meat, and from the time that the first sonorous roar of the great sea monsters comes over the ice until the last ton of blubber is stored in the great cave no one sleeps on Kings Island. Sometimes sixty walruses have been killed out of one herd by these daring sea hunters. The ivory from these creatures runs into many hundreds of dollars.

These cave people who live just below the Arctic Circle are also great whalers, and there is seldom a year goes by that some of these leviathans of the deep do not feel the savage thrust of the cliff dwellers' harpoons. With walrus and whale meat galore and hundreds of seals and thousands of Bering Sea tomcod, the Kings Islander manages to live fairly well.

Probably the finest ivory cribbage boards in the world come from Kings Island. Not only is the carving on these cribbage boards remarkably well done, but the drawings of nearly all the animals of the sea which adern the surfaces are exquisitely done and the surfaces are exquisitely done and make the boards very attractive to

ACCUSED OFFICER BECOMES A WRECK

Severity of Prison Discipline Tells Upon Young Man Accused of Murder

VIENNA. July 17.—The severity of the military prison authorities toward Lieutenant Hofrichter, who is being tried in conection with the army poison plot, seems to have defeated its own ends. own ends.

Deprivation of physical exercise and of mental relaxation, together with the intimidating methods of the secret military tribunal, has resulted in the prisoner's nervous collapse. After a long adjournment of the cross-examination, Hofrichter was again brought before his judges yesterday. He is charged with sending poisoned medicine by post to various army officers, with the object of clearing a way for his promotion. One of the officers, Captain Mader, of the general staff, died.

The judges were made to obtain a single definite answer from the accused yesterday. He spoke at random, and could not be made to understand what had been said to him. His sentences were so broken and disconnected and his excitement so great that a doctor was sent for to administer drugs. Eventually it was considered expedient to give up the attempt at cross-examination and to allow the prisoner to go back to his cell.

It appears that he has not slept for

The American custom of "coffee for breakfast" is gaining quite a foothold in Canada, with the result that there is a largely increasing demand for a coffee of really good quality.

In order to meet this demand I decided some time ago to put up a coffee the quality of which would be fully equal to the best that we are accustomed to get when we visit the United States.

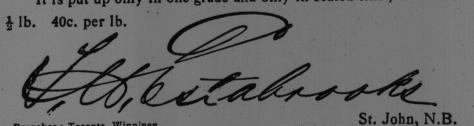

It has taken a full year to make preparations, to secure and install the most improved machinery, to decide, after innumerable tests, on the exact standard of coffee which would be most pleasing in flavor, strength and fragrance, and to select and import the highgrade coffee required. This has all been done, and the coffee is now being sold under our brand, "Estabrooks' Red Rose Coffee."

Not only is the coffee of a very fine quality, but we have been fortunate in finding a new and greatly improved process of mauufacture; crushing instead of grinding, a process which removes the chaff or skin of the bean and breaks the kernel into small, even grains. This is described on the label of the tin, and will be described more fully in later advertisements.

You know the success that has attended "Red Rose Tea," a success due entirely to the superior quality of the tea and good business methods. Every guarantee made on behalf of "Red Rose Tea" will apply to "Red Rose Coffee." It will always be just as

Our travellers are just starting out, and it will be about two months before they can visit all the merchants in the Maritime Provinces. By the end of that time we expect to have the coffee in practically every store that sells Red Rose Tea. In the meantime, if you will write and give me the name of the merchant you deal with, I will see that you can get a tin at once.

It is put up only in one grade and only in sealed tins; 1 lb. and many nights and has no appetite. A mixed civil and military medical commission is to examine the state of the prisoner's mind, and the result of this examination will be taken into consideration in the further proceedings. Quantities of communications have been sent to the lieutenant from all parts of the empire by believers in his innocence. But nothing of a nature to raise his spirits or encourage him is allowed to reach him.

Two of the prisoner's cousins, who, firmly believing in his innocence, were on their way to Vienna to endeavor to see him, and, if possible, accomplish something in his behalf, were in the Bohemian express which was wrecked on Christmas Day. One was terribly injured and died later. The other is still in the hospital.

To wash fine lace curtains, first brush out as much dust as possible with a soft whisk broom. Then baste each curtain carefully upon an old piece of muslin a little larger in size than the curtains, tacking each scallop firmly in place. Make a strong suds with Taylor's Borax Soap and warm water, and let the curtain soak in this for about half an hour. Then squeeze gently with the hand until clean; (do not rub) rinse, starch and spread perfectly straight on the floor or other smooth surface, fastening the muslin down firmly with small brads. When perfectly dry carefully remove the basting threads and the curtains will appear like new.
