Sheet Editor Ponders . . .

Over past months "The Sheet" has strived to . . . What can I say? It isn't too clear what our role has been at RC. At the beginning of the year we thought we knew, but as time progressed, the students seemed to lose much of the interest they possessed when registering, we felt less and less confident in going to the trouble we did to put out the campus paper. So as time went on we became depressed. Fewer and fewer people tried to help us and all the time we clamoured for more and more assistance. But little assistance came and we finished up the year wondering whether our time did anyone, including ourselves, any amount of good.

I suppose that what we really were dreaming of when we put out the paper was a campus where all the students co-operated with one another and set the much needed example to the world of friendly human relations prevalent in a community of many divergent individuals. We wanted to show the world that people of all religions, colours and beliefs can climb the ladder of life hand in hand without war, prejudice and hate. But who knows whether we were even slightly successful? Perhaps most of the students weren't aware of what we were attempting to do. Perhaps our emphasis on "honesty," "controversy," "peace," and "justice;" our unalterable belief in the right of free discussion, went unnoticed to most.

It is difficult to say whether "The Sheet" partially accomplished what it set out to do. It is our hope that our efforts were not completely in vain and that next year someone will try a little harder to create the atmosphere of co-operation, understanding and love that will make us all happier, healthier, and better world citizens.
