

MIND YOUR BUSINESS.

We like greatly the device of an ancient Rhodian, and say, "Mind your business." That is, a man of business must mind his business, or his business will mind him. If he gives his energies to pleasure, others will pick up his neglected living. If he devotes his chief attention to party politics, he will soon be in the party. If he runs wild after some new fad, he will become a bankrupt. We do not say that he should deter himself from occasional recreation, that he should be indifferent to the welfare of his country, or that he should pay no heed to the spirit of the times. Not at all; but these are side issues, and should have attention only commensurate with their importance, and subordinated to the main question.

"Mind your business!" Not another man's; but your own. Let him alone, so far as interference with him is concerned. When he asks your advice, and render it cheerfully if in your power; but do not interfere in matters of his private life, or in his moving money, or in his conduct only makes you appear presumptuously prying.

"Mind your business!" Slander no one, politically, morally, or socially. If your rival is prosperous and respected, surpass him in industry and virtue, if you can; but do not seek to put him down by artful and lying appeal to sectional prejudices or sectarian partiality.

"Mind your business!" Be progressive in your own line. Outside of that, be conservative. Respect the legal rights of your neighbors hard by, and of your countrymen at large. You would resent their dictation in your personal matters, whether social, moral, or political;—be assured they would resent yours with equal force, and justly.

"Mind your business!" Every one of you, kindly, actively, perseveringly,—and you will thus be an agent in carrying out a portion of the plans of a benevolent Providence, who would have men to be "diligent in business" as well as " fervent in spirit."

"Mind your business!" But not to the neglect of your family. Make money to means to reasonable ends. Your chief end is to train up a good, educated, virtuous, God-fearing family. Money is an important means to this end; but this end is to be aimed at, whether you make money or not. Remember this; and attend most assiduously to the cultivation of your own spirit and manners, and by example as well as precept train virtuously the tender and lovely beings who are increasing around your table and fireside; and when your locks whiten, and your eyes grow dim, and your step falters, you will have in them a blessing better than "thousands of gold and silver."

A "POINT" OF HEALTHY STOCK.—A late writer says that a "wide, deep chest in all animals is an indication of robust constitution, and is, no doubt, the point of shape to which breeders should look when selecting either males or females. It is not enough that a bull or cow should show a wide, full breast in front, but the width should extend back along the back, and show itself just under and between the elbows. Fullness through the region of the heart is indispensable in either sex.

Referring to weaning and selling lambs, W. H. Ladd, of Jefferson County, Ohio, [first-rate authority on all "sheep matters,"] says: "My practice is to turn the lambs in with their mothers, after they have been separated some twelve months, and as soon as they nurse, separate them again; then, after twenty-four hours, allow them to nurse once more. Since I have adopted this plan I have never had an ewe's udder injured. Lambs should have a very little salt frequently when first weaned, as the ewe lacks the large proportion of salt which the mother's milk contains. But great care should be used not to give them much salt at once, or it will do them no good; and if a lamb continues to nurse soon after being taken from the mother, it seldom ever recovers from it."

PROFITS OF SHEEP-RAISING.—A correspondent of the Northwestern Farmer makes the following statement, showing how wool-raising pays those who manage it as it should be: "Last season I shorn 50 sheep; the wool sold for $552. I sold within the year 74 sheep, which was equal to the number of lambs raised, 354—making $1,366. My sheep are the Spanish Merino breed, and mostly ewes." He considers sheep-raising the most profitable business a farmer can engage in.

A writer in the Boston Cultivator says that "John Ball, of Langdon, has fattened cattle every winter for more than thirty years past, on no other feed than hay. He generally commences feeding about the 20th of June, and reserves the hay first cut for feeding that portion of his stock intended to be sold for beef in the Spring. Hay allowed to ripen, its seed is of very little value; though the whole should be eaten by stock, the seed remains undisturbed, and therefore furnishes no nutriment.

PATTERNING TURKEYS.—Four turkeys were confined in a pen and fed on meal, boiled potatoes, and oats. Four others of the same breed were kept at the same time confined in another pen and fed daily on the same articles, but with one pint of finely pulverized charcoal mixed with their meal and potatoes. They also had a plentiful supply of broken charcoal in their pen. The eight were killed on the same day, and there was a difference of one and a half pounds each in favor of the birds which had been supplied with the charcoal, they being much the fattest, and the most greatly superior in point of tenderness and flavor.—Cor. Germantown Telegraph.

ABANDONING BEES.—Although strictly out of season we propose to record the following note which is recommended for discontented workers. Watch the hives closely a short time. It can soon be pretty well determined whether they intend to remain. In that case they will at once commence building comb; and a good deal of talking sound can be heard upon applying the ear to the side of the hive. If, however, they hang about idle, as if discontented with their new home, they are probably meditating removal. Then close the entrance so that only worker bees can pass, to confine the queen. If this cannot be done readily, carry the hive to a dark room and keep them confined two or three days. Give them water and honey with which to commence comb building. It is also recommended to introduce into the hive a piece of comb with unsealed worker brood, which they will seldom leave.

POLLEN FOR BEES.—Dr. J. G. Mearns, of the German Apian, observed that his bees, in early Spring engaged in carrying to the hive from a neighboring mill, a quantity of yeast meal. It occurred to him that the only use to which the meal could be applied, was as a substitute for pollen. Following out this idea, he placed in front of his spire, a shallow trough of the meal, very finely ground; and lo! he soon found that this was speedily appropriated, on a fine day, the bees apparently preferring the meal to the state pollen; and the brooding in the hive proceeding as usual. The feeding continued until a moderate supply of farina was accumulated, and proved successful by other means.

THE SECESSION CONVENTION.

The following resolutions were introduced in the South Carolina Secession Convention on Wednesday:

Whereas, the causes which have produced a separation of South Carolina from the Federal Union have emanated from the State North of Mason and Dixon's line which are binding only; and whereas, it has not been against the Constitution of the United States that South Carolina has opposed her sovereignty, but usurpation by the government in violation of this instrument;

Resolved, That a commission be sent to each of the slaveholding States, bearing a copy of the ordinance of secession, and proffer each State, or any one or more of them, the existing Constitution of the United States.

The news spread rapidly, and a crowd collected amid immense cheering.

Mr. Miles moved that the Clerk telegraph the intelligence to the members at Washington. Carried unanimously.

The ordinance was ordered to be engrossed on parchment, and be signed by the President and members at 6 o'clock this evening at Institute Hall, and to be placed in the archives of the State.
