populous Colony of Vancouver Island. He ardly need to be said. To say that, if possible, would, we think, have been fully justified had he it will mature slowly, is equally plain. But here done so. Combine these Colonies under one is a great national emergency, as certain to come upon us as that boys who are springing up by inches will soon be men. Are we to do, as we stretch from Halfax to the shore opposite Vanconver's Island, to traverse the whole extent of horrible family broil, and inherit their batred for ever? Or are we to train them up in the belief that, when once men, they and we can have the British Empire should dissolve, as its mem- doubt not that an enthusiasm may be kindled, bers grow to maturity; but we think the time is before which the prejudices of stiff adherents to dangerous progress of opinion both here and in some colonists have fallen, and the real difficul-
