"As already announced," sail Mr.
Peters, "the manufacturers' associations and a cut in the price of milled lumber, and we will follow this with a tail of reduced freight rates on the lumber, and we will follow this with a tarist of reduced freight rates on the material in transit from the mills to the distributing points in the Territories. I am now working on this new tartift, but it will probably not be completed for publication until my return to Winnipes. En route east I go over the Crow's Nest road, and will conferwith the lumbermen along the road. More important still, the Mountain Lamber Manufacturers' association nas joined hands with us in the effort to maintain lumber prices at a reasonable maintain lumber prices at a reasonable figure. This will be accomplished in part by posting at every depot on the Canadian Pacific in the Territories a fall price list of lumber, so that setthere will be thoroughly informed and can protect themselves. In the past the manufacturers have held lumber at a figure which we deemed to be ex-cessive, while the retailers or middleat a figure which we deemed to be ex-cessive, while the retailers or middle-men have in some instances attached accessive profits. We are harding lumber from 35 different points, and it will be seen at a glance that the task of resconding rates to cover these points, some of them hundreds of miles further from the market than others, at the relieve him points and the police force patrolman aving been at the relieve him police. The police Chief E ther from the market than others, is not small. In many instances milling companies have taken their plants long distances from the markets because their works would thus be nearer the logs, and projuction thereby cheapened, but this means that we have to haul the product just that much fauther, and therein lies one of the diffaculties to be overcome in adjusting the tariff fairly to all producers.

though he remained in Rossland but a few hours, he has perfected arrangements by which the importation of mining timbers, stulls and similar mine supplies will practically cease. Heretofore much of the timber used in Rosland mines was brought in from points in Wassington, along the Spokane Falls & Northern railway, but under the new arrangement Canadian timbers will be used excusively and much money retained in the country that would otherwise go abroad nevertor return. In discussing the matter with a representative of The Miney that would otherwise go abroad never to return. In discussing the matter with a representative for supplies that the amount of money that annually goes out of the country for supplies that hight just as well be purchased at home, and this is not a wad thing for Canada. You may believe me when I say that the Canadian Pacific railway is particularly desirous of doing everything it can to foster and encourage home industry and home production. This question of local supply for mine timbers is a comparalycely smell me, but it illustrates why out ideas rare in this respect, and I can assure you that what we are doing in this instance we stand ready and willing to do elsewhere as fast as the opportunity presents itself. The fact of the matter is that British Columbia is so economisly rich in natural resources that nothing but local industry and enterprise is necessary to make it as prosperous and productive as any country on earth. There are thougands of acres of updands along every valley in southern British Columbia that are ideal for the cultivation of fruits of all kinds. Fruit and vegetable farming will always pay in this province. The local market will always be good, and should there be a surplus of crops there is just as much profit and a certain market in the castern prairies. The same thing applies to the fisheries and the lumber industry. But these things cannot be done without a considerably larger inflow of immigration than has been the case for several years past.
