

Moir's Chocolates
have an individuality that is unmistakable. We select the cocoa beans—roast, husk and clean them—add the cocoa butter and cane sugar—and flavor with vanilla beans. The WHOLE is then put through a grinding process for hours, which refines every particle and renders our chocolate coating absolutely smooth, giving it that individual delicious flavor. The chocolate is then applied to the many varieties of centers—packed in attractive boxes and offered to you as the finest chocolates on the market.

LONDON, May 10.
That all the members of the crew did not act in the manner expected from men of their calling on the night of the disaster is being slowly drawn out from the witnesses at the British Board of Trade enquiry under the searching examination of Sir Rufus Isaacs and other counsel. It came out during yesterday's hearing that the firemen of the Titanic, when the water flooded their quarters, raided a third-class saloon for life-preservers. Certainly, as is pointed out, these were not needed by the passengers, as the vessel carried only a small proportion of her complement of third-class passengers. That importance is attached to the action of the firemen is shown by the question put by Lord Mersey as to how the men reached that part of the vessel.

VII.—INDUSTRIAL DEMANDS OF SOCIALISM.

The collective ownership of all industries which are organized on a national scale and in which competition has virtually ceased to exist.

Ruskin says that the notion of Discipline and Interference lies at the very root of all human progress or power; that the "Let Alone" principle is in all things which man has to do with, the principle of death; that it is ruin to him, certain and total, if he lets his land alone—if he lets his fellow-men alone—if he lets his own soul alone. That his whole life must be continually one of ploughing and pruning, reeking and keeping, governing and punishing.

Now the discontent of labour has underlying it principles of Justice which have been violated by the business world. And while the labourer has found that the only way his demand will be granted will be by striking, yet this does not make the matter any better, for the employer promptly adds the increase to the produce and it really means more profit for him and more hardship on those who buy. But the real trouble began when the business world forsok the paths of righteousness and instead of fair dealing substituted "keen financiers" and gave the greatest honour (?) to him who could best "do his brother" for the largest amount. But without going into the details how this is done I want first to state the ethical side of business, and in doing so shall quote largely from Ruskin.

The greatest material result obtainable by master and servant will be, not through antagonism to each other, but through affection for each other, and the master will get the greatest possible return not by endeavouring to get as much work as possible from the servant but by seeking to render his appointed and necessary work beneficial to him, and to forward his interest in all just and wholesome ways. Of all the professions the merchant only is presumed to act always selfishly. His work may be necessary to the community, but the motive of it is understood to be wholly personal. The merchant's first objects in his dealings seems to be to get as much for himself and leave as little to his customer as possible.

But the truth of the matter is that of the Soldier's profession is to defend the Nation; the Pastor's to teach the Physician's to keep it in health; the Lawyer's to enforce justice in it; the Merchant's duty is to provide for the Nation. And it is no more the function of a True Merchant to get profit for himself out of that provision than it is a clergyman's function to get his stipend. The stipend is a due and necessary adjunct but not the object of his life, if he be a true clergyman, any more than his fee is the object of life to a true physician. Neither is his fee the object of life of a true merchant. He has to understand to the very root the qualities of the thing he deals in and he has to apply all his sagacity and energy to the producing or obtaining it in perfect state, and distributing it in at the cheapest possible price where it is most needed.

"Rob not the poor because he is poor," says the wise man, but this seems to be the mercantile form of theft, consisting in taking advantage of a man's necessities in order to obtain his labour or property at a reduced price.

Ruskin gives a case of commercial wealth acquired on the exactest principles of modern political economy. Suppose that three men formed a little isolated republic and found themselves obliged to separate in order to farm different pieces of land at some distance from each other, each estate furnishing a distinct kind of produce and each more or less in need of the material raised on the other. Suppose that the third man, in order to save the time of all three, undertake to transfer the commodities from one farm to the other, receiving as payment a portion of each parcel of goods. And supposing this carrying, watching the course of each man's agriculture, keeps back the article with which he has been entrusted until there comes a period of extreme necessity for them, on one side or the other, and then exacts in exchange to them all that the distressed farmer can spare of other kinds of produce: it is easy to see that by ingeniously watching his opportunities, he might possess himself regularly of the greater part of the superfluous produce of the two estates and at last, in some year of severest trial or scarcity purchase both for himself and maintain the former proprietors thence forward as his labourers or his servants.

That similar transactions have taken place, and are taking place now is only too true. The formation of the enormous Trusts in the States and elsewhere is full of such dealings. (Continued in Wednesday's issue.)

Got Locked In.

Last night Mr. P. Corbett, bookkeeper at I. F. Perlin's store, had an unenviable experience. When close up time came the proprietor, thinking that all hands were gone, locked the door. A half an hour later Constable Dempsey passing down Water Street heard a man rapping at the door from the inside. On hearing the bookkeeper's story the officer went to Mr. Perlin's residence and procured a key to release the would be prisoner.

Purloined a Boat.

Last evening a man who came from the South Side left his boat at the King's Wharf while he went up town to make purchases. When he returned the boat was gone and found that two boys had taken it and went pleasureing around the harbor. The owner was very much annoyed, and had he caught the youths would have given them a ducking.

GREYBEARDS FIGHT.—Two old greybeards were having a bit of a scrap on Water Street last night. Citizens failed to separate them, and Officers Keefe and Stanford arrested the disturbers, bringing them to the police station in a cab.

BANKERS MOVEMENTS.—The bankers on the West Coast are making rather tardy voyages and few arrivals are recorded. Balt has been a scarce article this year, is generally speaking dear and this accounts for the lateness of first trips.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DINDRUPPER

From another witness, S. J. Rule, a bathroom steward, it was also learned, after close questioning, that there was a rush on lifeboat number 15 and that she left the Titanic with only four or five women and three children, while sixty-one men got away in her. Rule said that scouts were sent to look for women and children, but they looked only on one deck and then returned and said there were no more there. Then first officer Murdoch told the men to fill the boat. There was then a rush for the boat.

Sir Rufus Isaacs: "You knew more women and children were on board?"
Rule: "I imagined so."
Sir Rufus Isaacs: "Then you did not obey the order that women and children were to go first?"
Rule: "We were ordered into the boat."
Witness admitted that the men looked only on one deck for women. He could not give the names of the so-called scouts.

Sir Rufus Isaacs promised to have every man from boat 15 brought before the court as soon as possible.

It came out to-day that the watertight compartments for practically three-fourths of the length of the ship were opened by order of the engineers for upwards of one hour.

The Stomach Needs Help

The liver, kidneys and bowels must be kept active with DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.
The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression. You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Ed. Mullock, Bates & Co., Toronto.
