By the Aid of Your Nose.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

If you were set down in a shop anywhere with your eyes closed, and asked to tell what kind of a shop it was, could you always guess by the aid of your nose?

And I don't mean only in cases where the smell was something poignant and unmistakable, as in a fish shop for instance, I mean in any shop.

Take a shoe store. The next time you go into one, notice the distinctive smell. No, it isn't wholly the smell of leather. If you think it is, go into a leather shop and see how different the distinctive odor there is. By the way, I wonder if there ever was a person who disliked the smell of leather? But in the odor distinctive to the shop, though leather is a component part, perhaps the dominant part, it is not the whole.

That Undeniable Smell of The Apothecary Shop.

The apothecary shop is another example of a distinctive but unnamable odor. It seems to me that the soda fountain contributes an influence that dominates that odor but I am not sure. It is certainly a most wonderful blend in which one catches suggestions of soap, of toothpaste, of toilet powder and the dry vague fragrance of a thousand drugs. Last time I was in an apothecary's shop I sniffed so hard and so thoughtfully in an attempt to analyze the subtle odor that I suddenly found the clerk looking at me suspiciously.

Wet Smells and Dry Smells.

A grocery shop also has a fragrance all its own—a clean, spicy, dry smell. Smells can be divided into dry and wet, you know. And I think it is almost always the wet smells that are offensive. Leather is a dry smell. Fish is a wet smell.

Although it has nothing to do with shops, there is one more odor that clamors to be mentioned on the chance that it may arouse the same train of memories in your mind that it did in mine.

That Parlor Smell.

I went to see a very old lady the other day. She insisted that I go into her parlor and mumbled in a low voice to me to open the door and raise the shades. And oh the queer little stuffy parlor odor that smote my nostrils! It carried me straight back to the days when I used to go with my father on Sunday afternoons to call on elderly relatives and parlors closed up during the week where opened to receive us.

The sense of smell is one of the humblest of our five handmaidens but when she touches the chords of memory she comes into her own and displays a power greater than even that of the two proudest, sight and hearing.

Everyday Etiquette

"At a dinner is it proper for the woman to sit on the right or left of the man?" asked Mabel.

"A man offers his right arm to the lady whom he is to take to dinner and the lady sits at his right," advised her brother.

What We May Come To

By a Morbid Pessimist.

"Summoned for using a covering of sugar on a cake and abetting in the sale of it, a confectioner at—was fined ten shillings on each summons."

A painful scene was enacted at the Old Bailey when John Scutterack, the well-known banker, was convicted of possession of a Bath bun. A secretary deposed that, entering the prisoner's office, she found him unable to speak and noticed that he hid a newspaper over his desk. Having had suspicions aroused by noticing crumbs on his floor, his secretary raised the paper and found the half-consumed bun. In fulfillment of her obvious duty to her country, she communicated with Scotland Yard.

Prisoner pleaded guilty, and said that he had formed the Bath-bun habit in pre-war days and was unable to resist temptation. He made a pathetic appeal for mercy, urging that, in any case, the City career was ruined. Passing sentence of two years' imprisonment, the judge said that he would consider revision of the sentence if the prisoner divulged the source whence he had obtained the bun. The authorities had long suspected the existence in the city of a secret bun shebeen.

Agnes Blair, The Nasturtiums, Penge, was acquitted at Croydon of employing a domestic servant known as a "general" in contravention of the Munitions Act.

Discharging the case, the chairman of the Bench said that only the most complete proofs could be accepted in a charge of this serious nature. The Bench accepted the defendant's evidence that the alleged "general" was paying guest. For his own part he could not imagine any more wildly improbable story than this trumped-up tale of the existence of a domestic servant of any sort in these days. And indeed, though he ought not to say it, he was inclined to think that, even if the case had been proved, the defendant's organising acquisitiveness ought to be rewarded by a seat in the "Win the War" Cabinet.

"Too much sugar" was the successful defence of a man charged at Barnet with disorderly conduct and assaults upon the police. Defendant expressed contrition and explained that his wife discovered some lump sugar in an old canister. It being his birthday, he foolishly took two lumps of it in a cup of tea, and it "got into his head." He had no recollection of his subsequent behaviour.

"Suicide while burdened with remorse" was the jury's verdict at the inquest upon a Wimbledon builder. The deceased, once a highly respected resident, had been leading a life of extraordinary crime. He built, to the order of a man who had since absconded from justice, a house costing more than the £20 building outlay of any sort limited by the realty. He had dressed his wife and children in boots (sensation in court), whence procured the police could not trace. He had travelled by rail to Epping and Richmond, obtaining travel permits under pretexts of business journeys (further sensation), thus paying only three times the pre-war fare. He used matches for his pipe (sensation again), manched butter-scotch while on night duty as a special constable, and on one occasion entertained friends on 1917 ale at thirty shillings a bottle. The corner remarked that it was a terrible case of unpatriotism and depravity, leading to a tragic end.—T.B. in the Daily Mail.

DOING ONE'S BIT.

How gladly I would do my bit, if I "bit" had the chance! If I joyfully I'd go and hit a Prussian with a lance! But I have spavins on my knees, a ring-bone on my wrist, and I have foot and mouth disease and so I can't enlist. A lot of us must stay at home, too lame to seek the front, too old to sail across the foam and do a warlike stunt. And yet we need not throw a fit, or grumble day and night, for we can surely do our bit, although we cannot fight. I cannot make the Germans die, or sink their submarines, but I can help the food supply by raising fields of beans. I cannot chase the brutal foe, and hew him with an axe, but I can help to make the kind of spirit that patriots admire, that makes the young man grasp his steel, filled up with martial fire. And I can set examples here, and more examples there, by hooting down all talk of fear, all dirges of despair. Even though my ailments make me sit supinely all the day, methinks I still can do my bit, and figure in the fray.

Are you going to get a New Suit of Clothes for Spring? If so, buy now; as the longer you delay the more you pay. We have a splendid line of Tweeds and Serges of the very finest quality, and our cut and workmanship need no advertising. SPURRELL BROS., 365 Water Street.—mar14,ed.t

Recruiting Statistics.

Of Places of a Population Between 200 and 250.

Grignot leads this list with the magnificent percentage of 11.38. This is truly splendid. Flower's cove, away up in the Straits, shows the fine percentage of 10.74. The percentages of British Harbor, Blacktown, Bauline, Gooseberry Island and Humbermouth, also call for a special word of praise. In each of the following places the percentage has exceeded 4: Topsall Road, Kilbride, Robinson's Head, Badger's Quay, Bay L'Argent, and Salvage Bay. This is one of the best lists published, although it ends with the names of several places that have done nothing in the way of furnishing men for King and Country.
