GEORGE JEFFREY, GUELPH burst threaming of the orimitates as they burst threaming of the orimitates as they the crass above. "A boat, a boalt twenty pounds for a oost?" was Philip's repeatedly uttered thought as he kept nearly abreast of the trapper, and exercised his younger but not more useful eyesight in the same direction. And most assuredly he would have at that moment gladly given twice twenty pounds for a boat, or any other sum which the possessor of such an article had demanded. But, alas' the wish and the willingness were both vain; his yearning eyes were strained to no pur-pose—a boat there seemed to be none. Yes, there was—one solitary cance; and at last Steive descried it haff hidden under the bank at the top of a narrow creek. His heart gave a wild bound as he grasped an arm of each and silently pointed to it. No word could be uitered at that moment even in a whisper—so mar write the Indians now—but the in-timitation so conveyed was sufficient; Jim and Philip saw the cance likewise, and, their hearts bounding not less violently than Steive's had done, they slid over the crag with great clerity, precipialing theingles with a sound which was heard by the redskins, who immediately began to clamber down towards them. Nevertheless, they had gained the side of the cance, and which was heard by the redskins, who immediately began to clamber down towards them. In less than an inute, therefore, they had it in the water, and as the paddles were lying in the bottom ready for use, they leaped in the moment the skift began to float. Alas, they entered too soon. The creek was shallow and their weight grounded the cance. Some one had to go out to lighten her and push her for-ward into deeper water. "Till go," crief Jim, creaking aloud in his excitement, and ere any of -the others had time to get before him he was over the side and exerting all his strength to shove them out into the river. "Oh, God, we arelost," groaned Phil. ip. "Once, again, sir," cried the panting Jim. "One more effort and she'll float." Simultaneously the effort was made and by strong men who knew that their lives hung upon the issue. This time it was successful, for with one mighty pash Jim sent the cance flying forward into the stream, and thenext moment he was clutched by the hands of half a dozen savages. His companions were safe, but he was taken. He saw this to be the result, and heroically gave himself for them. He might have re-strained his last superhuman effort, and had them with him as companions in the hands of the Indians, but his one thought was to save them, even at the sacrifice of himself, and he did it. Philip uttered a loud cry when he saw Jim surrounded, and was impulsively about to jump out of the now floating cance to his assistance, when Fteive, with avigorous clutch, drew him back.
