POLITICAL PROBABILITIES.

The Mail's Ottawa correspondent says; "More than one Minister has expressed the opinion that there must be an adjournment of Parliament from day to day till some agreement is arrived at. The question of leadership of the House has been helved until the new Government is able to meet and act for itself. In the meantime everyone is at liberty to choose his own candidate. It rests of course between Sir Hector Langevin and Sir John Thompson, and if the former is chosen, the arrangement will be regarded as only temporary. The meeting which the Ministers held today was called by personal letters from Mr. Abbott. He wrote to all who had accepted, inviting them to confer with him in the office of the President of the Privy Council. All the Ministers except Mr. Chapleau and Mr. Frank Smith made their appearance. Mr. Frank Smith is out of the city, and Mr. Chapleau was absent on account of illness and doubtless other reasons. The situation was talked over for and hour, and Mr. Chapleau was no doubt the city, and Mr. Chapleau was absent on account of illness and doubtless other reasons. The situation was talked over for and hour, and Mr. Chapleau's attitude was no doubtthe chief topic. At 1 o'clock six of the Ministers emerged and walked off in pairs. Sir Adolphe Caron and Sir Hector Langevin were together, for since the political horizon became obscured they seem to have become inseparable. Sir Adolphe is at Sir Hector's house or Sir Hector is in Sir Adolphe's office. They are pulling in the same boat, and what the one does the other stands or falls by. After them came Messrs. Tupper and Foster, who were followed by Messrs. Carting and Costigan. Those that remained in the room were Mr. Abbott, Sir John Thompson and Mr. Bowell. The three had evidently been delegated to give further consideration to the situation. They were a special committee for the pacification of Mr. Chapleau. In half an hour they adjourned.

In private interviews several Ministers authorize the statement that Mr. Chapleau is still pressing for the portfolio of Railways, and the demand is not being acceded to. Sir Hector Langevin's friende express themselves as satisfied with the turn of events, and say that Mr. Abbott's Premiership is a check to Mr. Chapleau.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—The Cabinet will meet OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—The Cabinet will meet Parliament this afternoon as if the illness of Sir John Macdonald had not terminated fatally. The Premier will not be lying ill at Earnscliffe, but he will be silently waiting in his apartments for the meeting of his indolent and superfluous Senate to-morrow night at 8:30. All the Ministers will be back in their old nortfolios with night at $:30. All the Ministers will be back in their old portfolios with that of Railways and Canals probably in charge of Hon. Mackenzie Bowell. Sir John Thompson will be the real Premier of the country with a mask in both Houses. The Government supporters will hold a caucus to-morrow morning, and will press for an early adjournment with a view to holding an extra session in the fall. This will likely be vigorously on

The regulations had never been specially brought to the notice of the Prince of Wales, but when they were brought to his notice, and looking back at all the circumstances of the case, the Prince saw the error which he had committed in not requiring Sir William Gordon Cumming to immediately report the matter to his commanding officer. Mr. Stanhope added:

The London Chronicle finds fault with the Government and the War Onice for providing a cushion to soften the Prince of Wales' fall. Instancing the case of a private who was degraded for shielding a comrade who stole a trifle while drunk, the Chronicle asks, "Why should a field marshal—the Prince of Wales—be treated differently. We get nothing in the shape of military benefit from any of the Royal family. The least we expect is that they remember that they wear the uniform."

The London Daily News says: "We venture to say the Prince of Wales' new departure, in substantially apologizing to Parliament and the country, exhibits a just deference to public opinion which will dispose of the whole matter. The pain which the unpleasant process must have cost the Prince will count as a part of his expiation with every generous mind."

OTTAWA, June 16.—When the House opened this aftermoon the late Premier's chair was vacant. No information was vouchsafed as to who was to fill the vacant portfolio of Railways and Canals. The announcement was made by Sir Hector Langevin, and this settled all speculations as to who would be the leader of the Commons. Sir Hector Langevin had insisted upon his rights, and those rights had been conceded by the new Premier. Mr. Chapleau was the only Minister absent.

Sir Hector Langevin read the following statement from Hon. Mr. Abbott:

"Having obtained the requisite permission from his Excellency, I desire to make a statement of proceedings after the death of the late Right Honorable Sir John Macdonald. It was felt by his Excellency that the state of public affairs did not necessitate the formation of a new Cabinet until the grave had closed over the late Premier and the last honors had been paid him. On the morning following the funeral his Excellency, exercising his constitutional right, applied to the Hon. Sir John Thompson for his advice with respect to the steps which should be taken for the formation of a new Government. Later, on the same day, by Sir John Thompson's advice, I was myself sumfor the formation of a new Government. Later, on the same day, by Sir John Thompson's advice, I was myself summoned by his Excellency, and after consideration I accepted on the following day the duty which his Excellency desired me to assume. I therefore communicated with my colleagues and requested their consents to remain in their respective officer, and with the requested their consents to remain in their respective offices, and with their assent submitted to his Excellency my recomendation that they should be continued in the positions, which his Excellency was pleased approve, and he also sanctio prove, and he also sanctioned my as-ng the departmental office of President of the Council. The vacancy caused by the lamented death of the late Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald has not been filled, and, pending the appointment of a successor, the affairs of the Department of Railways

Connolly was commanded to appear on the floor of the House, and Sir John Thompson moved that "an act with respect to certain matters affecting administration of justice be read a second time." It was briefly discussed in committee and passed its reading.

At 4:10 Michael Connolly appeared at the bar, attended by his counsel, Mr. Ferguson, Q.C., in his barrister's gown. Connolly was silent and respectful now. He wore a light summer suit with the cost unbuttoned, revealing his faultless white waistcoat and gold Albert chain. His head was bent slightly forward. His left arm leaned on the gilded bar, and touched the brazen end with the finger his right. His attitude of respectful attention changed not as long as he was allowed to stand there.
"I move," said Sir John Thompson, served Dr. Montague from the Government benches. "Yes, read them in English," struck in members on both sides of the House amid general laughter when Mr. Rouleau's task was done.

Sir John Thompson then asked Mr. Connolly whether he was willing to place in the custody of the committee the books in his possession that have been demanded in the Tarte-McGreevy investigation.

Mr. Daly interposed, on behalf of the witness. "Before that question is put," he said, "I move that Michael Connolly be heard at the bar of this House by counsel."

This motion was agreed to and a lengthy This motion was agreed to and a lengthy defense of Mr. Connolly's position was read by Mr. Ferguson, reciting the probable injury to the business interests of the firm which might follow communication to the public of information contained in these books having no connection whatever with the investigation, but adding that if the House insisted upon the surrender of the books Connolly was prepared to bow tast the decision.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, and the item for Dorchester peni-tentiary was discussed, Mr. Muloch taking tentiary was discussed, Mr. Muloch taking sexception to the manufacture of wooden-ware carried on there. In connection with the item for the Stoney Mountain penitentiary it was announced that Col. Bedsor, whose health had broken down, had been retired on a pension, and that the penitentiary was now in the charge of Mr. Foster, an accountant in the penitentiary branch of the justice department at Ottawa.

The House rose at 6, and after recess other items were discussed. The item of $150,000 for revisions of electoral lists under the Franchise Act under the heading of legislation provoked discussion in the neighborhood of 11 o'clock. There was talk about the officers employed, about the neighborhood of 11 o'clock. There was talk about the officers employed, about the revising barristers and on the general broad question of revision.

Mr. Mulcok complained of the enormous expense to which the country had been put by the previous revisions. Altogether they had cost nearly $1,000,000. The act itself was condemned on every side of the

They probably might not do much good for the Tory party if expended in that way, but they would do far more for the country as a whole. The item, however, was agreed to. On the motion for adjournment, Sir Richard Cartwright asked when the Minister of Finance intended to make his budget. Mr. Foster said that if nothing extraordinary happened he proposed to make his statement on Tuesday next.
