Satisfactory Experiments by the Inventor-A Pressure of Fifty-Five Thousand Pounds LONDON, Oct. 20.—Mitchell Henry, home ruler, member of parliament for the county of Galway, has issued a circular to tenants, pointing out that if any of them think they can get better terms from the land court he has neither power nor wish to prevent them; but he points to

THE UNEQUALLED LOWNESS of the present rents and other advantages. He is willing to allow a reduction of 15 to 20 per cent. on the half year's rent due in May last, but hereafter the old rates will be expected. The second experiment was the raising of a 20,000 pound weight, it being understood by all present that no additional water had been supplied to the generator. The entire experiment was in full view of the visitors, thus admitting of no possible mistake.

The third experiment was the forcing of light through plates of glass two inches in thickness.

Yesterday morning broke clear and bright and if fine weather has a tendency to make people thankful, then the clear, bracing air of Thanksgiving day was appropriately donated. The city generally was very quiet. The day was spent in different ways, according to the manner in which individuals consider it behooves them to thank the Almighty for his goodness. The churches were all well attended and fitting services were conducted therein. The theatres and other places of amusement received a liberal share of attention, especially the matinees. Those who are fortunate enough to possess a horse and carriage went out driving, and those who are not fortunate enough to possess these luxuries, did not go drivingat least in their own carriages. The sharp crack of the sportman's firearms might be heard in neighborhoods where game is supposed to haunt, and a few disciples of Isaak Walton could be seen along the docks. On the whole, yesterday was very pleasantly spent, and no doubt all were well satisfied with his excellency's choice of

Mr. Telfer speaks with great earnestness, which not unfrequently rises to eloquence, and has considerable power of humorous and pathetic description. The musical portion of the service consisted of a selection of appropriate music under the direction of Mr. Warrington. It was well rendered, and the last chorus, "Thanks be to God, He laveth the thirsty land," is worthy of special mention. Miss Kerr was the organist. was the organist.

QUEEN ST. METHODIST CHURCH.

The thanksgiving services in this church yesterday morning were conducted by Rev. W. J. Hunter, who took for his text Psalm W. J. Hunter, who took for his text Psalm xcv. 2, "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving." A national day of thanksgiving is very proper, but to keep it properly is not to sit in church for an hour and then go home to a sumptuous dinner, and spend the rest of the day in feasting and merry making, without once thinking of giving thanks to God. There are several habits of mind which are preventive to thanksgiving. The first of these habits is grumbling, which was in existence from the first ages. We find Eve grumbling at being prevented from partaking of ling at being prevented from partaking of the forbidden fruit. Although she had as cess to every tree in the garden, yet she grumbled because she was restrained from mark have corse into about £3,000,000 by grumbled because she was restrained from eating the fruit of the one tree. True, the man who has nothing to grumble at has nothing to desire, and the man who has nothing to desire cannot be happy. The second habit of mind which pre-

The second habit of mind which prevents thanksgiving is that disposition of mind which prompts us to mind other people's business rather than our ewn. It is astonishing how much of our sorrow comes from minding other peoples affairs. We look with envy on other people's fine horses, carriages, houses, etc., and reason thus: Why should this man, who has no more brains than I, live in a fine house, be gorgeously attired, and ride in his carriage, while I have to walk, dress in shabby clothes, and live in a hovel? But, if on our hearts do not overflow with thanks-giving, then we cannot be capable of thanksgiving.

Small as our mercies may seem, they are far more than we deserve, for, should we be treated with what men term justice we be treated with what men term justice we would long ago have been destroyed.

Most of our trouble arises from anticipating the future. We always look upon the dark side of the future and cross the bridge before we come to it; but when these gloomy forebodings arise we should always dispel them and have faith in God to conduct us to the end.

The police force at Hawarden castel, Mr. Gladstone's residence, has been strength-ened to insure the safety of the premier. The Daily News says: "It has been decided thanksgiving is that culpable ignorates which excludes God from preservation. We recognize that God made us but we often, too often, forget that he alone can saye us, and that he can destroy us at leisure, that, as he can open the the windows of heaven and let forth the rain on the earth that it may become fruiful, so also he can close these windows and put an end to life. The present life is a voyage on the sea of time. What we here have given to us is not given in perpetuity. So whenever trials arise thick around you give thanks that they have an end and that a glorious one.

Cultivate that habit of mind which makes the best of everything. When a bee lights on a flower which contains no nectar it does not turn up its bill in disgust but collects wax from the flower to make combs to contain other honey.

The poorest man to-day enjoys luxuries which kings in ancient times never dreamed of. We now can receive the products of every climate into our country, but better than all these we can look upon the well thumbed family Bible, the family altar, etc., and if on seeing these things our hearts do not overflow with thanks; giving, then we cannot be capable of thanksgiving.
