It is that when a country like Canada, having both natural re-poinces and a people with capacity and enter-prise to make use of them, adopts with deter-mination a thorough roing National Policy of protection, she does not thereby become so un-profitable a customer to old friends as is too commonly supposed. The truth is that the in-contropiltable a customer to old friends as is too commonly supposed. Our import of ry, and of American too, in hiftery, and of Ar some measure, was actually increased, and that for the obvious reason that our new en-terprises required machinery faster than the home capacity could furnish it, the greater part of the new machinery being, in fact, of such kind as this country could not furnish at all. Then it was cited as proof of the N. P. having failed, that it was actually increasing instead of diminishing our consumption of im-ported manufactures, the objectors not having the wit to see that this particular result—that of substituting for the importation of certain goods, the importation of the machinery by which such goods were produced, was in fact the most signal proof of its efficiency and suc-cess. But, this aside, it is still true that Can-ada, with protection, must by reason of the inwas acti

But, this aside, it is still true that Can-ada, with protection, must by reason of the in-creased prosperity thence accruing, be as good a customer to England as she was without it, possibly even a better one. But our purchases may be more in some kinds of merchandise, and less in others, than before. Let us repeat here a certain contention of our own which we advanced recently in these columns, and which we feel quite certain that no British objector, or any other for that columns, and which we feel quite certain that no British objector, or any other for that matter, will ever be able to demolish. It is that, let us develop home manufactures as we may through protection, we shall still con-tinue to import from Great Britain about as much as we are comfortably able to pay for, one year with another. Wonder if our "kin beyond sea" really want us to import more and to become their debtors to an aggregate beyond our means of payment? We should hope not. For hair a century and more back Canadian bankers and merchants have known this for a solid fact: That the great danger has always been in importing too much; never by any solid fact: That the great danger has always been in importing too minch; never by any means in importing too little. We shall al-ways import enough, never fear; give yourself no uneasiness on that score. On another occa-sion we propose to show that one important effect of Canada's protective policy not only is, but inevitably must be, to diminish greatly the proportion of our imports from the United States, compared with our proportion from Great Britain. The ordinary lines of clearage are of a form so continue. As an example, the Giobe and Mail on the commercial union issue are trying to separate the people of Canada into farmers (commercial unionists). There were no rallways leading to Minneapolis, and no Chicago to speak of Thousands of prairie farms which are now pro-ducing cheap wheat were then producing buffalo grass. Shipping flour or grain by rall was then an unknown practice. Both were istored all winter and shipped in the spring via the rivers and lakes only. There was no At-lantic cable and but a small steamship service. The Liverpool market was not glutted then as now by the surplus breadstuffs of the four cor-ners of the earth. The great wheat fields of Indue, of California, of Australia and of West-ern and Northwestern America were then prac-tically unknown. A blockade of Hussia's ports would not now as then put a famine price upon breadstuffs in Liverpool. Britain could eut off othe Russian supply without any more serious result to her consumers than a slight and tem-porary increase of prices. Sir W. P.
