

this eight-year term he possessed quite a herd of cattle. A fourth pair of legs was required now, and he offered his herd of cattle as security for the money to make the purchase ; but was not successful. His friends then appealed to the Council on his behalf, and they loaned him $40 to go to Chicago. Again a temptation came to enter the museum there at a wage of $40 per month. This was not accepted, however, and he went to peddling again. He made his way to St. Paul, where he met Mr. Ericson, who wanted to fit him out with a pair of limbs. He resolved to return at once to Carman and sell his stock and make the purchase. He wrote to his friends as to the plan of action, and
