

MILLION MARK IS IN SIGHT AND DIRECTORS ARE HAPPY

Saturday's Attendance Was Twenty Thousand More Than on Same Day Last Year, and Today's Crowd Should Beat All Records.

RECORD OF ATTENDANCE.

Monday	1913	1912
Tuesday	22,000	25,000
Wednesday	21,500	20,000
Thursday	21,000	18,000
Friday	20,000	18,000
Saturday	22,500	20,000

The million mark is in sight! The first great week of the exhibition, commencing by day after day, has swelled the chain of figures until the happy hopes of the most cautious director promise abundant realization. The actual outcome more than justified the public, and the results to be asked is a steady pressure on the great value of public spirit that will lift the enterprise daily nearer the goal of its attainment.

The closing hours of Saturday evening witnessed the exodus of a typical sightseeing procession. The splash of rain which crossed the grounds about the time that an imposing throng from Hamilton entered the gates was merely in the nature of a last word from the weatherman. Thereafter the day cleared splendidly and the elements combined one and all to make everything run satisfactorily. At one time in the early evening, when the line-up stood deep for the opening of the grandstand, the only method of passing through the throng was by a system of lockets. This was resorted to with great enjoyment by the streams from the Midway.

A Successful Day. Hamilton was marked by all the concentrated energy and enthusiasm which the contingent of delegates could bring along. Admiration sung from every tongue. The luncheon was a little love feast between the two cities; good will favored all the best.

Pleasure All Ours. Ex-Mayor Oliver referred to the pleasure of the directors in reciprocating the off-extended hospitality of Hamilton. This city was becoming the Manchester of Canada in its manufacturing enterprises and everybody was delighted. Then followed a toast and three cheers.

This demonstration was replied to by Mayor Allen of the visiting delegation. He wished to thank the directors for their courtesy, and the city towards the exhibition, and a more abiding affection. The keys of the city were ever at the disposal of Toronto people. They had some of the greatest manufacturing establishments in the world. It was in the Hamilton building on the exhibition grounds.

Hon. Adam Brown, hailed as the "grand old man" brought forth applause for his public spirit in coming for the occasion. He recounted his pioneer experiences and told of his continued faith in Hamilton. Today his faith was being realized. The story of Canada's prospects was written on the exhibition grounds. The dreaming days of Canada were done. As long as united and with a landgrasp across the seas in imperial unity to anxious and in imperial grandeur should be held. Canada was the imperial highway and the C.P.R. had made it that.

He made a rather significant reference to the coming in of undesirable. His urging that they be kept out was received with approval.

Trust Peace Will Last. The personality of the Canadian people, Archibald Codr had said was vital. Intelligent, God-fearing citizens were the foundation of any constitution.

Not only the granary of the world but the ruler of the British Empire was Earl Grey's prediction for the Dominion. "We have had centuries of peace. God grant we may never have war again," he declared passionately. "But let us have hands across the sea in such a grip that neither honeyed nor masked words can shake it. May we never be without pilots and leaders to guide us right."

Mayor Hocken brought great cheer to the hearts of the visitors by suggesting that a Hamilton building was very probable for next year. It was advisable, he thought, to concentrate their products for public information. The exhibition owed a great deal to Hamilton enterprise.

The mayor then suggested that the directors should honor the memories of those who had founded the institution. Why not name the drives after these men? Why not withdraw drive, McNaught circle, Booth avenue. The climax, he felt, would be to call the Midway the old Kent road. (Laughter.)

B. H. BULL AND SONS HAVE CHAMPION

Their Jersey Bull is the Best Animal on Exhibition.

WON ABOUT ALL PRIZES

Professor Vanpelt Says Jerseys Were Finest He Ever Saw.

Sultan's Raleigh, the 3-year-old Jersey bull, owned by B. H. Bull & Son of Brampton, is again the champion of the show. Prof. Vanpelt, the cattle expert from Waterloo, Iowa, finished the Jersey judging at 3.30 Saturday afternoon.

He is recognized as the best authority on dairy cattle on the continent, and declared to The World that this year's show is much better than last year. He thought last year that the Brampton Jersey exhibit was as good as he ever saw, but he now states that much improvement has been made.

Sixty-nine individual animals passed before him for decision during the day, and he says that is a very hard day's work. B. H. Bull & Son secured senior championship for bulls on Sultan's Raleigh. The World that this year's exhibition was as good as he ever saw, but he now states that much improvement has been made.

The most coveted prize in the show is that known as the graded herd, consisting of a bull any age, two cows over three years old, a yearling and a calf. B. H. Bull & Son easily won first and third, while Sir William Mackenzie won second.

This makes the championships line up as follows: B. H. Bull & Sons, Brampton, 1st; Kirkaldy, 2nd.

Prizes for grade cattle follow:

Beef. Steer, 2 years and under—J. J. Leask & Sons, Greenbank, Ont. Fat Cattle. Steer, 2 years and under—J. J. Leask & Sons, Greenbank, Ont.

Two export steers, under 3 years—1 and 4, J. J. Leask & Sons; 2, T. A. Russell; 3, P. Stewart, Everton.

Champion fat steer—Gold medal, James Leask & Sons.

HARNESS HORSES IN FINE SHAPE

Saturday's Competitions Brought Out Some Very Handsome Animals.

CONFIDANTE A WINNER

Crowe and Murray Carried Off Silver Medal in Breeding Classes.

Judging in harness classes started at the exhibition at 2 o'clock sharp on Saturday. The best event of the day was the tandem class.

The four-in-hand event was postponed till this week. Most of the classes were brought out big entries, especially the event for lightweight green hunters. The Whip, coming down at the last fence, gave his rider a nasty fall, but luckily he rolled clear and was unhurt. Results follow:

Dineen's Genuine Furs

THE FOX belongs to the canine tribe and is widely distributed around the world. For ages mankind has hunted the fox, but the nature and cunning of the animal has everywhere preserved it from extermination, and it is that some of the species will be preserved and raised in semi-captivity to supply future generations with furs for dress.

Among fur-bearing animals the fox family is the most valuable. The variety of its colors, which seems to follow no laws as to species or locality, is one of its most striking features.

The typical fox of England appears in different shades of red, and white and black foxes have been known to occur. There are gray and yellow foxes in Europe, and one variety of black fox, where the animal usually has white fur.

The fox may change color with the seasons, becoming a blue-gray or white in the winter, and darker gray or brown in the summer. But this is not a fixed law in the nature of the animal.

An attempt has been made on the Presbytère Island, off the coast of Alaska, to breed foxes that will take on the blue-gray winter coat of fur. This has been done by introducing the valuable Blue Island fox fur from the island of Prince Edward Island.

The fur of the Black Fox has been secured in the newer parts of Ontario. In the wild the fox preys on animals of the same species and eats its own kind.

The fox fur is mostly used in Canada is caught by trappers and hunters who trade with the Hudson Bay Company. Valuable pelts are also occasionally secured by the trappers in the newer parts of Ontario.
