

"PRESIDENT MCKINLEY DIED," SAY HIS DOCTORS

"I want to know exactly what the President's condition is, so that I may tell his friends what to expect." Vice-President Roosevelt to the doctors in attendance at the President's bedside. "You may tell them that President McKinley will not die." Dr. Rixey.

PRESIDENT'S RESTFUL SABBATH SAW CONDITION SATISFACTORY

Another Surgeon Added to the Staff Agrees that the Outlook is Encouraging—Crisis Will Not Have Passed for Forty-Eight Hours More.

Buffalo, Sept. 8.—Latest reports from the Buffalo home state that the President is resting comfortably and that no alarming symptoms had developed on Sunday. The following bulletins were issued through the day by the President's physicians: 10.20 p.m.—The President is resting comfortably and there is no special change since the last bulletin. Pulse 130, temperature 101.4, respiration 30. (Stroed.)

9 a.m.—The President passed a good night and his condition this morning is quite encouraging. His mind is clear and he is resting well. Wound dressed at 8.30 and found in a very satisfactory condition. There is no indication of peritonitis. Pulse 131, temperature 102.4, respiration 24.

THE PRESIDENT'S SUNDAY.

Condition is Favorable. The complications may arise. Buffalo, Sept. 8.—Throughout this quiet Sabbath every word that came from the big vicar-clad home in Delaware avenue, in which the stricken Chief Magistrate of the nation lies battling for life, was reassuring, and to attest the change of his recovery are so greatly improved that all of those who have kept the patient vigil at his bedside feel strongly that his life will be spared. The developments of the day advanced, until toward evening the confidence expressed in the President's recovery seemed too sanguine.

Famous Surgeon Agrees. Dr. Charles McBurney, the famous New York surgeon, who had been summoned to Buffalo to attend to the President's wound, after a short examination, to which he said he had found no single unfavorable symptom, joined in the last afternoon bulletin, which declared that the President's condition was satisfactory to all physicians present. It is not strange therefore that the Vice-President, members of the cabinet and other distinguished visitors who called came away with lighter hearts and more buoyant tread and gave expression to the most optimistic sentiments and the joyful tidings went out beyond the blue-coated picket lines to gladden the hearts of the silent throngs gathered there.

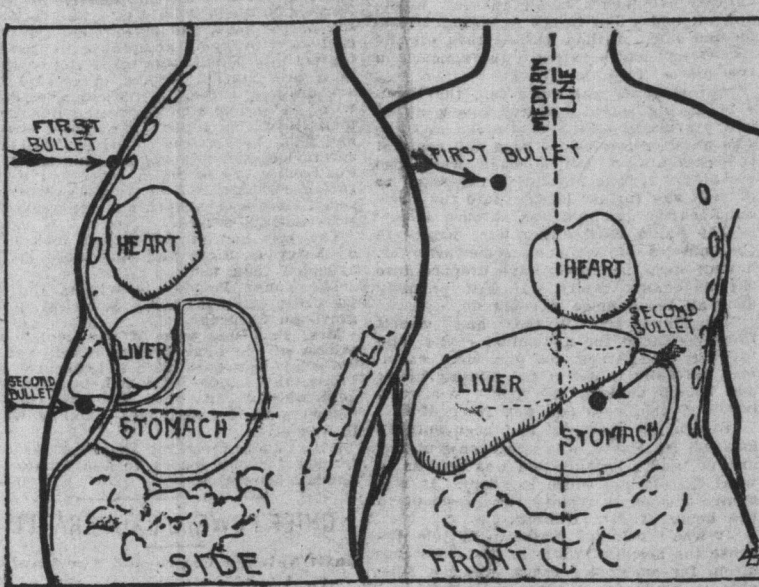

TWO BULLETS IN GRAVE DANGER

Hopeful Bulletins Do Not Tell All the Gloomy Forebodings of the Surgeons.

MRS. MCKINLEY SUSTAINED BY DRUGS

Pathetic Meeting of the Devoted Wife With Her Stricken Husband.

New York, Sept. 8.—The Journal has the following from Langdon Smith at Buffalo: In spite of hopeful bulletins, in spite of all reassuring talk, and in spite of the optimism shown by the attending physicians, there are certain gloomy forebodings of the surgeons. The awful crime of the Anarchist, who will end in a double tragedy—the death of President McKinley and the death of his devoted wife, killed by a single bullet. The critical feature of the situation does not lie in the matters of pulse and temperature; but in the fact that the bullet which pierced the stomach has not yet been located; it lies in the danger of complications near at hand. The bullet rests a jagged, poisonous piece of lead in the stomach, and the physicians dare not look for it. They dare not even hunt for it with the Roentgen rays, but if it were found it is not thought that the President could survive the necessary operation necessary to its removal.

PATHS TAKEN BY TWO BULLETS ONE GLANCED, ONE TO BE FOUND

One of the Physicians Present at the Operation on the Distinguished Patient Describes in Detail the Delicate Work.

New York, Sept. 8.—What is supposed to be the first bullet contained in the chest wall, just above two inches to the right of the sternum, over the third rib. It glanced off and there is no indication from the contusion as to what direction it took. The epidural is shredded, but the bullet did not penetrate the integument of the skin. "The second bullet penetrated the integument in the lower back, between the fifth and sixth ribs and one and a half inches to the left of the median line. It passed thru the intercostal space, under the abdominal muscles, the superficial and deep fascia, the parietal peritoneum, the outer wall of the stomach, and the anterior wall of the stomach, the stomach cavity and the posterior wall. The protrusion is that the bullet then penetrated the posterior parietal peritoneum and lodged in the muscles of the back. It is possible, however, that it may have spent its force and dropped into the abdominal cavity. From present knowledge there is no indication for making any further search for the bullet."

REQUEST MADE FOR STATE REASONS

Atmosphere, Which Was Very Gloomy, Now Cleared by Encouraging Pronouncement.

Buffalo, Sept. 8.—For reasons of state it became necessary yesterday afternoon to secure, at the demand of Vice-President Roosevelt, a definite statement as to whether the President would live or die from the effects of his wound. The physicians hesitated, in view of the boundless uncertainties surrounding such a case, but the order for a conference and verdict was issued in such a manner as to brook no refusal, evasion or equivocation.

The surgeons joined in the communication, Dr. Myrator, Wisner, Mann, Washin and Park. Every phase of the case was examined, discussed and discounted. All possibilities, as far as medical skill can determine, were taken into consideration in formulating the opinion of the consultation. After scanning the President's condition from every viewpoint, a unanimous verdict was reached by the consultation of surgeons which was reported to the high official who had demanded the pronouncement, in the following words:

"After a careful scrutiny of the President's condition, taking into consideration all developments, actually occurred or liable to occur, our conclusion is that his recovery is an extremely remote possibility of peritonitis being the only element of danger."

"Will he live or die?" "He will live," was the answer of the surgeon who had conveyed the report of the consultation.

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has sent the following telegram to the British Embassy at Washington: "Ottawa, Sept. 7, 1901. 'Lord Pauncefote, British Embassy, Washington, D.C. 'I have the command of His Excellency the Governor-General to ask Your Lordship to convey to Mr. Hay, the Secretary of State, the expression of the sense of horror with which the government and the people of Canada have learned of the fratricidal attempt upon the life of the President of the United States, and the deep sympathy which they feel in the distress of the American nation and Mrs. McKinley's family. They fervently hope and pray that it may please Providence to foil the hand of the assassin and to preserve a life held in such high reverence, not only by the people of the United States, but by all other nations, and particularly by the people of the Dominion of Canada. 'Wilfrid Laurier. 'Prime Minister."

LEON F. CZOLGOSZ Another View of the Anarchist-Assassin.

CZOLGOSZ MAKES A CONFESSION ADMITS THAT HE PLANNED TO KILL

Declares He is Alone—His Excuse, I'm a Disciple of Emma Goldman—Followed His Victim Wednesday and Thursday—He is a Vain Coward.

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 8.—At the request of Secretary of War Root, both the District Attorney and the Chief of Police have adopted a policy of keeping from the public as far as possible all information concerning Leon Czolgosz, the miserable creature down in the dungeon of police headquarters who Friday shot President McKinley.

Czolgosz Vain and a Coward. In taking this course, Secretary Root seems intuitively to have grasped the character of the assassin and to have hit upon the one thing that would cause him the most chagrin. So far as can be ascertained, he is of a piece with all the anarchist type of murderers. His one overwhelming trait is vanity. He is just the kind of conceited vermin the Anarchist master spirits use as tools for their senseless crimes.

Like all of them, he is a shivering coward at heart. When he had fired his two treacherous shots into the man who in all courtesy and kindness was reaching out to shake him by the hand, when the deed his crazy egotism had served him up to do was over and for the moment his miserable life seemed in danger, he was ghostly white with terror. How the Anarchists who were back of him—for there are few who believe his story that the inspiration was his own—must have worked upon so despicable a creature to get him up to the murdering point only those who did it can know. But their leverage was in the same inordinate vanity, which, now that the danger of being lynched is over, is enabling him to pose in the role of a hero and a martyr.

He was hardly well within the prison walls and there safe from mob violence before his conceit began to bring back his nerve. He was quite himself, all rather badly battered at the hands of those who connected with the case.

He watched over him all night, and that he made no attempt to kill himself report that he slept fairly well until daylight this morning.

Pleased at Having Picture Taken. The new day brought with it to him the conviction that he was one of the great conquerors of the earth. He had endless satisfaction in the thought that all the world was talking of him. It pleased him greatly when he was summoned to have his photograph taken for the rogues' gallery. He posed for the camera in a heroic attitude, with his hand on his hip and his eyes turned upward in the approved style of the martyr. Two pictures of him were taken, one in profile and the other a full face.

The utmost precautions were taken to prevent anybody from getting a glimpse of him on his way from his cell in the basement of police headquarters to the photograph gallery on the top floor. The halls were cleared, and policemen were lined up on each side of them, and through this line of bluecoats Czolgosz was marched. He walked with a firm step and seemed calm and composed.

His Appearance. Czolgosz is a Pole of the whey-faced, rather wall-eyed type, with a narrow forehead and thick hair. His eyes are color and rather watery. He is evidently quite proud of his hair, and has it trained to stand upright from his low brow in a semi-pompador style. He is rather small in person, and slight, but is not badly built.

The only bodily traces he bore of Friday's rough handling were a cut and swollen lip and a scratched nose, where Secret Service Officer Foster's heavy fist fell upon him, driven home with all the vigor of the officer's first furious transport of rage.

The color and necktie the assassin had worn were gone, and a scratched nose, where Secret Service Officer Foster's heavy fist fell upon him, driven home with all the vigor of the officer's first furious transport of rage.

DEATHS. COLLIER—His late residence, 87 St. David-street, William Collier, a native of Sligo, Ireland, is his 89th year. Funeral Tuesday, Sept. 10, at 3.30 p.m., to St. James' Cemetery, Friends and acquaintances please accept this intimation.
