SECOND IRISH CHAMBERS FOR BOTH PARLIAMENTS

London, May 18.—During the debate on the Irish home rule bill in the house of commons today Walter Hume Long, first lord of the admiralty, and member of the cabinet committee on Ireland, announced that the government proposed to accept the principle of a second chamber for both the northern and southern parliaments. The bill as at present constituted, provides for separate parliaments and a single central council.

Referring to an allusion to the United States made during the debate by Major-General Seely, coalition Liberal member for the Ilkeston division of Derbyshire, Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader, said: "I think it is high time that America should be dropped out of these discussions. Those who are pretending to speak for America should learn that we are still a great power and not subordinate to America or any other power."
