During the slege 265 per cent of the garrison were put out of action. This remarkable fact was due to wounded men returning to the front. Cases have been recorded where men have gone to hospitals four times, returning convalescent to the forts. The number of officers killed was proportionately greater than in any battle known in history.

This was due to the frequent lethargic condition of the men, who, without food and without sleep, moved only when ordered by their

St. Petersburg, Jan. 3.-The text of Gen. Stoessel's despatch to the czar, received prior to the surrender of Port Arthur, is published to day and reveals the stress under which he defended the fortress on Dec. 28 and 29. He declares his greatest enemies were scurvy and 11-inch shells that went thru every protection. He bemoans the fact that he has no ammunition, and that the capabilities of the defence were daily diminishing by reason of the loss & a mass of officers. He reports the final assaults of the Japs, and without putting his plea in words, presents facts that he doubtless hopes will melt the heart of his sovereign. The text of the despatch follows:

Situation Grew Painful. ON DEC. 28, the general wrote: The position of the fortress is becoming very painful. Our principal enemies are scurvy, which is mowing down the men, and 11-inch shells, which know no obstacle, and against which there is no protection.
