THE TIMES' NEW REPORTER

MUNICIPAL WADING POOLS Mr. Times New Reporter: Sir,—Will you please tell me why the gutters were not opened before this rain storm came? Several people have asked the question. Yours, SIMON WETFOOT.

On their way to and from school. In that case, also, there would not be so great a demand for rubber boots. Under the commission form of government the gutters would be opened, the children would be deprived of pleasure, the shoe dealers would lose business, the druggists and doctors would have less to do. Moreover, Sir, the taxpayers should always get a wage for their money. Hence you will not doubt oppose the commission plan and vote in favor of wading pools for the children and form pools for the children to wade in.

STATE AIDED EMIGRATION FROM ENGLAND

British Government Reported to be Planning to Co-operate With the Canadian Authorities

(Canadian Press)

London, Mar. 28.—The subject of emigration will engage the attention of the imperial conference, and it is possible that the matter will be given very wide scope. For the first time, Canadians will be appointed to the managing committee of the Emigrants' Information Office—the English government bureau—and Mr. Harcourt, the colonial secretary, says that "the question of the possibility and best method of utilizing the machinery of the labor exchanges in connection with applications and vacancies noted in the overseas countries will be discussed."

"You will readily understand," said a Canadian official, "of what great benefit this will be to both England and Canada. The dominion governments as well as the several provincial governments are spending large sums annually in order to populate their several areas. If the proposed arrangement is carried to a satisfactory conclusion it means that the British government will defray a portion of the expense that Canada will receive a much larger number of good settlers, and that one of the big problems of Great Britain will be solved by a fund being set apart to pay the passages of people unable to meet the cost."

Canada's interests will be protected by the fact that the advisory committee will see that only the best class are encouraged to settle in the dominion. For a long time we have felt that state-aided emigration offered a solution to the problem of unemployment in Great Britain."

W. D. Scott, the dominion superintendent of emigration, speaking to the writer, indirectly gave an answer to much of the criticism of the "John Bull" type by saying "during the calendar year 1910 we rejected only 252 British emigrants as long time whereas on the international boundary we rejected 14,131 persons."

"From what I can gather, from reports from the various agencies of the department, Canada will get 300,000 good class emigrants within the present calendar year and 600,000 within the fiscal year, which starts on April 1."

Mr. Scott also indicated that the regulations which are to be revised by laborers and mechanics going to districts where there are no labor disputes.
