FROM THE STATES.

The Reciprocity Treaty to be Rescinded.

[From the New York World, Sept. 19.] After giving figures to prove that Canada, but not the States, is benefited commercially the World says:

the outbreak of the war the public opinion of Canada has been insteaded and been insteaded and seem of the Southerners, and the most remote, in the success of the Southerners, and the success of the Southerners.

In a consider the color of the success of the Southerners of the success of the Southerners, and the success of the Southerners.

1. That the reciprocity treaty is misnam ed, as its benefits or neighbors commercially at our expense. 2. That the Canadians, by their tariff, have

3. That whereas, previous to the treaty there was a party in Canada favorable to annexation, and the tone of public opinion was not unfriendly, since it has been in opera-tion the people of the provices have learned to dislike us beartily 4. That the ten years past have been the most prosperous known to the annals of Canada, all on account of this treaty, while that portion of the United States bordering on that country has not maintained the su periority in wealth and commerce which al ways distinguished it previous to 1854.

It is not improbable that there will be a party in this country pending the discussion of a new treaty which will advocate non-intercourse, so as to make the Canadians fee their isolation and dependence upon the North; but there is little likelihood of their views prevailing. The West has a large in terest in the grain traffic through Canada, and will justly insist upon a liberal treaty with that province; but the next arrangement that is made must be much more favorable to the United States than the so-call ed reciprocity treaty."

NEW YORK .- It is estimated that Lee's whole army is now composed of A. P. and D. H. Hill's corps, (the latter having evacuated Richmond lately to reinforce Lee Hood's division of Longstreet's corps, with Stuart's cavalry, making an aggregate, probably, of

The Tribune's special Washington dispatch says: "Latest advices from Chattaoga received by the Government, represent Gen. Thomas as having re-established communications with Gen, Rosecraus, whose fact whole army was resting on a new line a few miles in front of Chattanooga. It is confident anticipated that he will be able to hold this position, and will soon be made strong enough by the arrival of leavy reinforcements to attack. Indeed, Gen Granger is reported to have said that had not Gen.

and their pleasure at our reverses and troubles arise from pure spite and dislike.—

What makes this feeling incomprehensible to the North is the fact that there is not the slightest ill-will among us toward Canada or its people. The fury of the Canadians against the North pending the Trent difficulty created some indignation in our midst, but the whole press of the country can testify that there is no active ill-will attribe North against the people of the British Provinces.

When, therefore, this matter comes to be discussed, in an out of Congress it will-be found:

The unofficial estimates of the rebel forces at 140,000 is regarded in government circles as greatly exaggerated. It, however, it is as thought not unlikely, they were nearly 100,0000, they largely outnumbered Roseroman's roops actually engaged.

On the whole, those who should know all that is to be known concerning the situation, are confident of the final result. They say that the victory would have been overwhelming had General Burnside been more swifted reinforce the Army of the Cumberland.
